PREFACE

Within this journal are recorded the highlights of the John Glenn High School 1965-66 school year, which will be held in fond memory.

Many hours of hard work, pleasant experiences, and entertaining activities which relieve the tension of schoolwork comprise the memories of this past year.

The second year as a functioning body, the first as an accredited high school, this year has been one of initiation. The administration and faculty have experimented in organizational and educational innovations which have proved successful.

The classes and clubs enthusiastically initiated activities. Students, faculty, and administration of John Glenn High School have had a distinct influence on the success of this year.

Presented in this journal are the highlights and distinguishing forces — the Faces of John Glenn High School.

The activities at John Glenn High School are not strictly academic. The academic atmosphere is spiced throughout the year by amusing and practical activities. These events give students healthful channels for their abundant energies. Clubs provide recreation and activities of mutual interest for their members. The class organizations sponsor entertaining events and service activities. The student councils provide activities for the enjoyment and participation of the entire student body. The service clubs provide opportunities for their members to perform civic or charitable acts.

Adding variety to school activities this year have been the Homecoming Celebration, Donkey and Student-Faculty Basketball Games, and the Glenn Gras. Intramural sports competition also gives students channels for their energies. "South Pacific" and "The Rich Full Life" entertained the entire community. The variety of school activities give to John Glenn — the Face of Fun.

Spirits Ran High

Mr. Higgins presents a trophy to Nancy Smith for the Junior Class's outstanding creation while Mr. Wickham, Band Director, watches.

The John Glenn-Grosse Ile football game was designated to inaugurate this year's Homecoming Celebration. Halftime activities were led by the John Glenn marching band, newly-costumed in their red, white, and blue uniforms. This performance was dramatically followed by the parade.

Floats were sponsored by the Class of '66, the Class of '67, Concert Choir, and Dramatics Club. The Aquettes, Echo staff, Latin Club, and Varsity Club exhibited cars. The float sponsored by the Class of '67 was judged first in the competition. An unusual float by the Senior Class, with the theme "66 Kicks Off," was given second place. The Concert Choir float placed third, and the Echo "Bug" was given honorable mention.

In addition to the gaily decorated floats and cars, Homecoming Queen 1965 and candidate for Homecoming Queen 1966 wound up the procession. The Queen and candidates were escorted to the center of the field by the Varsity Club and officially introduced. Spirits were high following the halftime celebration. The high spirits were only slightly dampened by Grosse Ile's 40-12 victory.

Honorable mention was given to the Echo Bug during Homecoming festivities.

Queen candidates were Dianna Decker, Cindi Crandell, Janis Greve, Karen Moorehead and Beth Cooper.

'Knight of Chivalry' Turned Out To Be

John Glenn High School's four-day Homecoming Celebration was climaxed by a Homecoming Dance, entitled "The Knight of Chivalry", at the John Glenn High School Ballroom.

The dance was a fitting climax for the festive celebration. Tastefully decorated in medieval fashion, the ballroom held an aura of elegance. The handsome couples danced to the music of Bob Durant's Band and were served refreshments by underclassmen.

The high point of the evening was the crowning of the Homecoming Queen, 1966. Principal Frank Higgins conducted the ceremony. The candidates, who had been officially introduced on the first night of the Homecoming Celebration at the Homecoming game, were again introduced. The candidates were Beth Cooper, Cindi Crandell, Diane Decker, Janis Grove, and Karen Moorehead.

Homecoming Queen, 1965, Chris Lund, and vice-president of the student council, Dave Bolitho, were to crown the new queen, who had been elected by the John Glenn High School student body in the previous week. After a ceremonial roll of the drums, a radiant Janis Greve and escort Mark Wagner, closed the evening ceremonies, and the stroke of midnight closed the 1966 Homecoming Celebration.

Was the Key to 'Rich Full Life

The John Glenn High School drama students of the fine arts department presented a fine production of Vina Delmar's "The Rich Full Life." Their many hours of hard work were more than rewarded; the play was warmly received. Several departments took part in the production, particularly the home economics department. The advanced home economics students took great pride in making the costumes; also, the art and industrial arts department assisted in designing and constructing the sets. Students of John Glenn High School were pleased with the outstanding presentation of "The Rich Full Life." Vina Delmar's play is the drama of a frail teenage girl, Cynthia, and her mother, who is determined that Cynthia attend the Senior Dance despite Cynthia's illness and the concern of her relatives. Sharon Robinson, Kathy Kendall, and Norma Kolasinski were cast as Lou Fenwick, Mother Fenwick, and Cynthia, respectively, and gave remarkable performances.

Lou (Sharon Robinson) and Cynthia (Norma Kolasinski) (above) have found the dress for the Prom. "Gosh, Mom," shouts Fredonia (Arlene Irving), (below) "Ricky Latham is simply the greatest!"

Irma Hall, Wanda Post, Karen Baxter, Linda Murtha, and Pam Cyparski (below) appear to be in the line-up, while performing in "Beetle-Bailey."

While Linus (Sue Greaves) colors, Charley Brown (Robbi Ruth) tells Lucy (Gloria Belden), below, about his private satellite.

Started Sales with a Spoof

This year, John Glenn High School saw its first Satellite assembly, given by the Class of '66 to promote the sale of this yearbook. All skits were acted out and produced by seniors. The skits ranged from "Peanuts" to "Tarzan;" all were based on the effect the Satellite's publication would have on comic strip characters. For the intellectual, the philosophical aspect was presented in a takeoff on "Peanuts." "Beetle Bailey," Wizard of Id", and "Lone Ranger" were other presentations. The highlight of the assembly was the presentation of Glenn's own "Johnny Bind," a factional character based on "James Bond" and created by John Wood, a student. A yearbook promotion assembly is expected to become a tradition at John Glenn High School.

Queen Dondershine tells Slave Davis (above) about her critical analysis of War and Peace. A cowardly Tonto (Karen Moorehead) begs The Lone Ranger, Mark Wagner, (above right) not to leave.

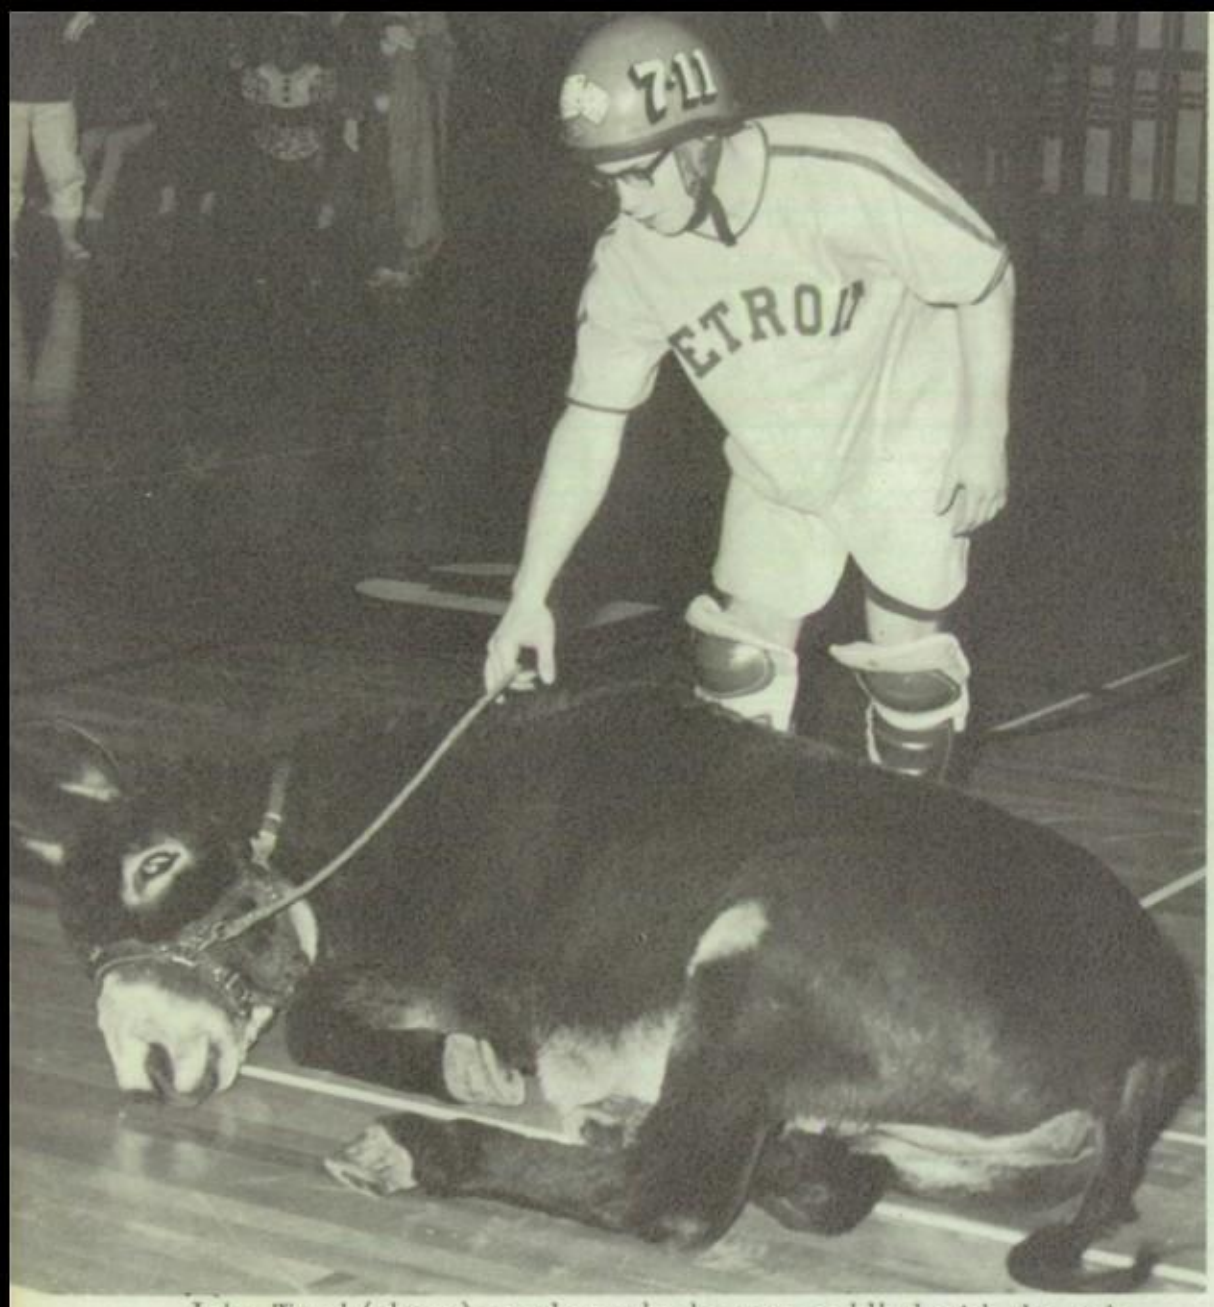
Nobody Had More

One of the most fun activities of the year was initiated at John Glenn High School this year by the Class of '66: Donkey basketball. The senior boys challenged the male faculty to a fast game of basketball on donkeyback. It was a hilarious evening. The antics of the donkeys and the frustrations of the players were both amusing and entertaining to the crowd that filled the gymnasium; it was an event no-one wanted to miss. The whirlwind game ended in a 37-34 victory for the male faculty; however, the senior boys were not disheartened. They had played a magnificent game — their first on donkeyback. The profits of the donkey basketball game would be used by the Class of '66 to finance graduation activities.

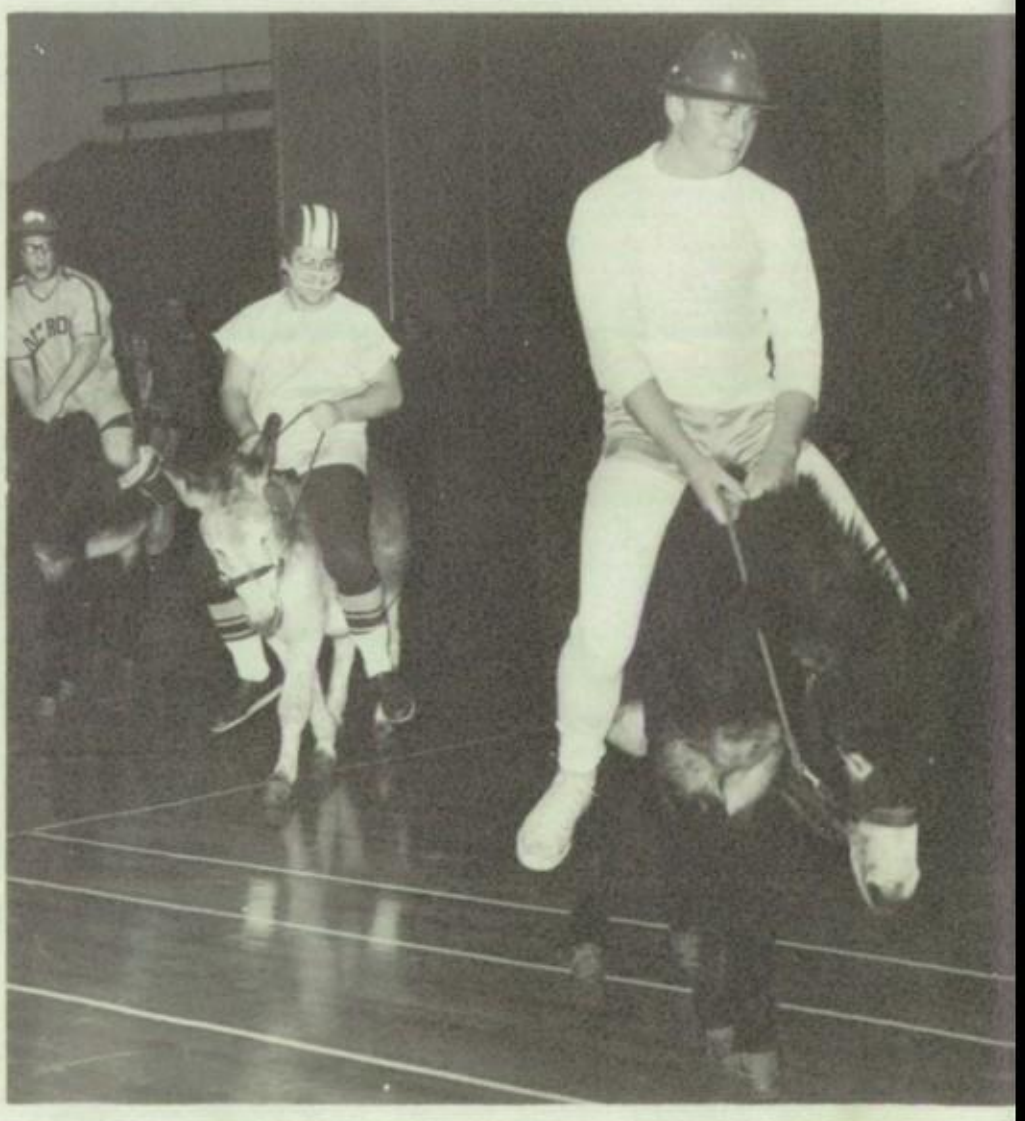
This was John Glenn High School's first donkey basketball game and the seniors felt that it was well worth their efforts to organize this entertaining activity.



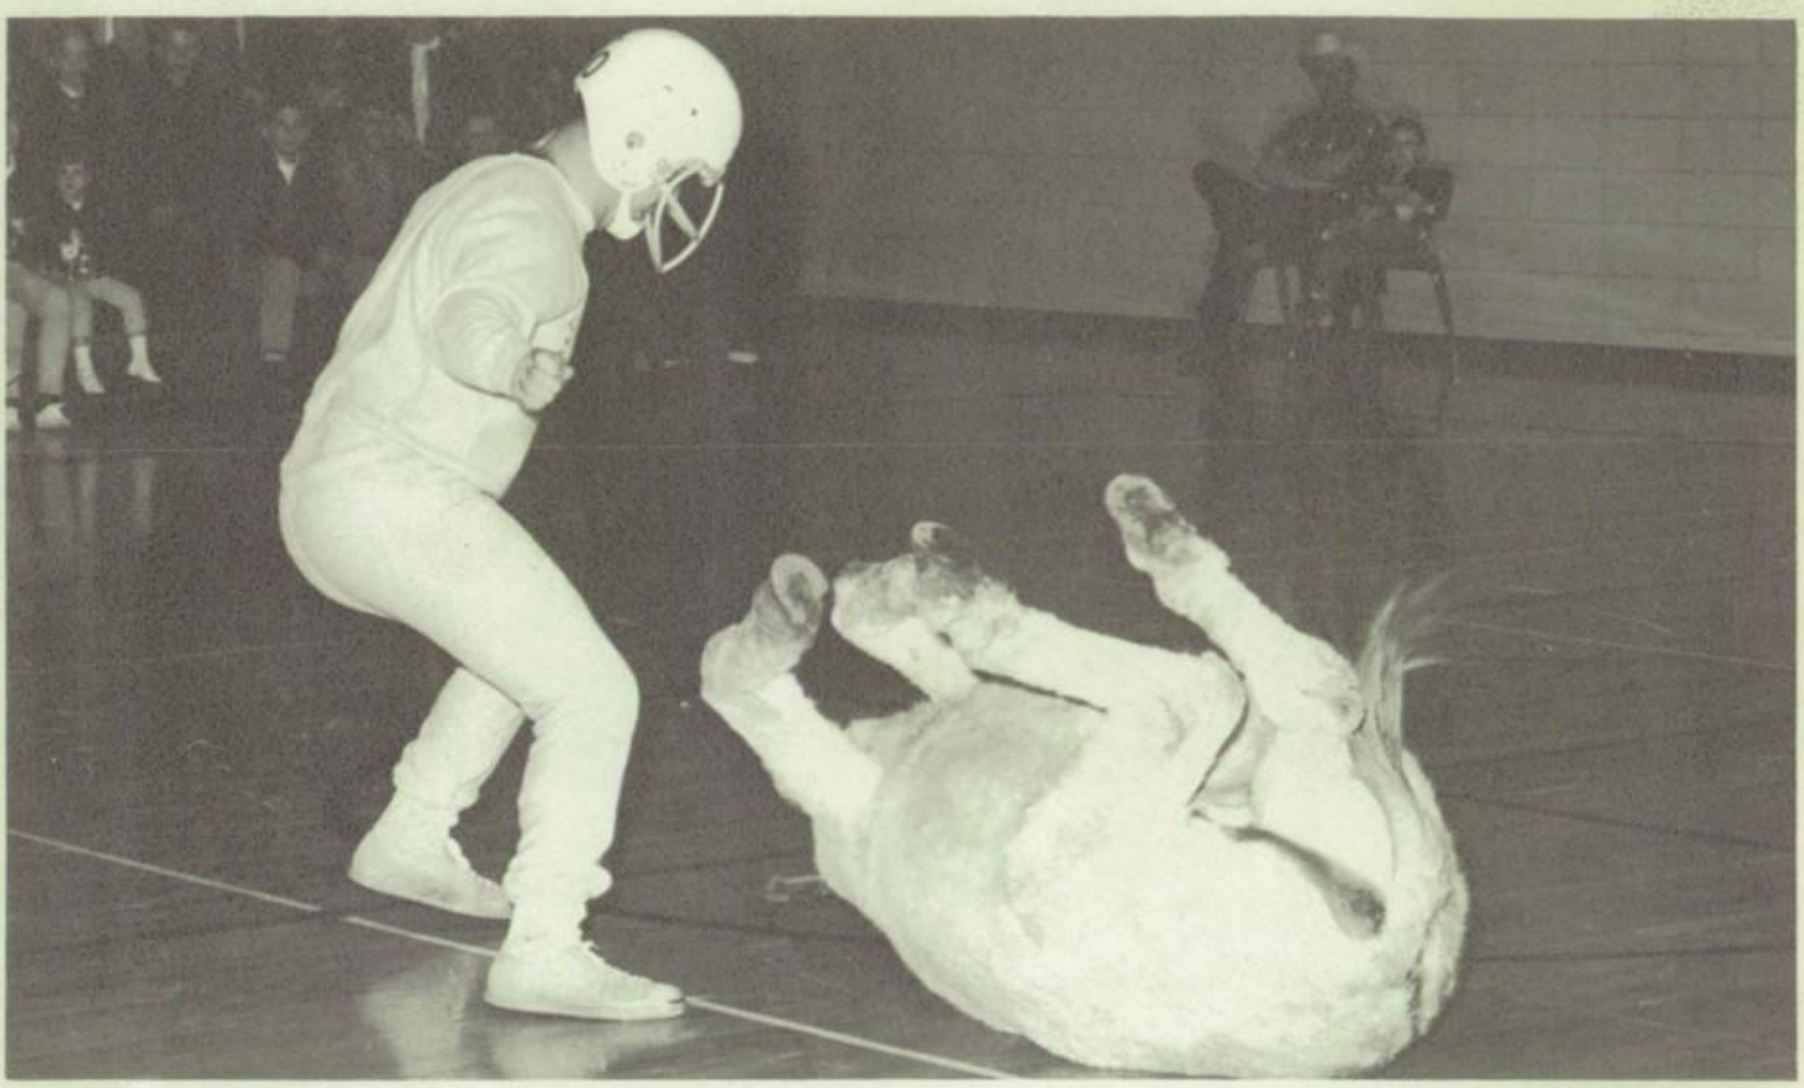
John Wood (above) wonders why he was saddled with the only donkey afflicted with senioritis.

Perhaps it's better that this contestant remains unindentified.

With confidence oozing from every pore, Dennis Reitz (right), Gary Kerr (center) and John Wood trot into the arena.

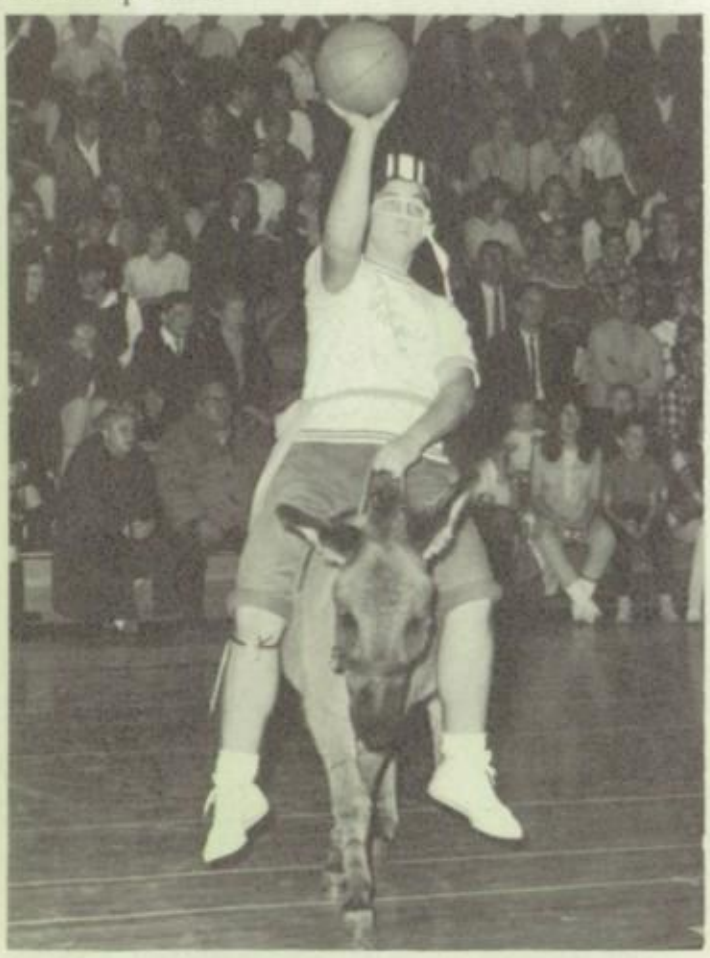


Fun Than the Donkeys, Except People

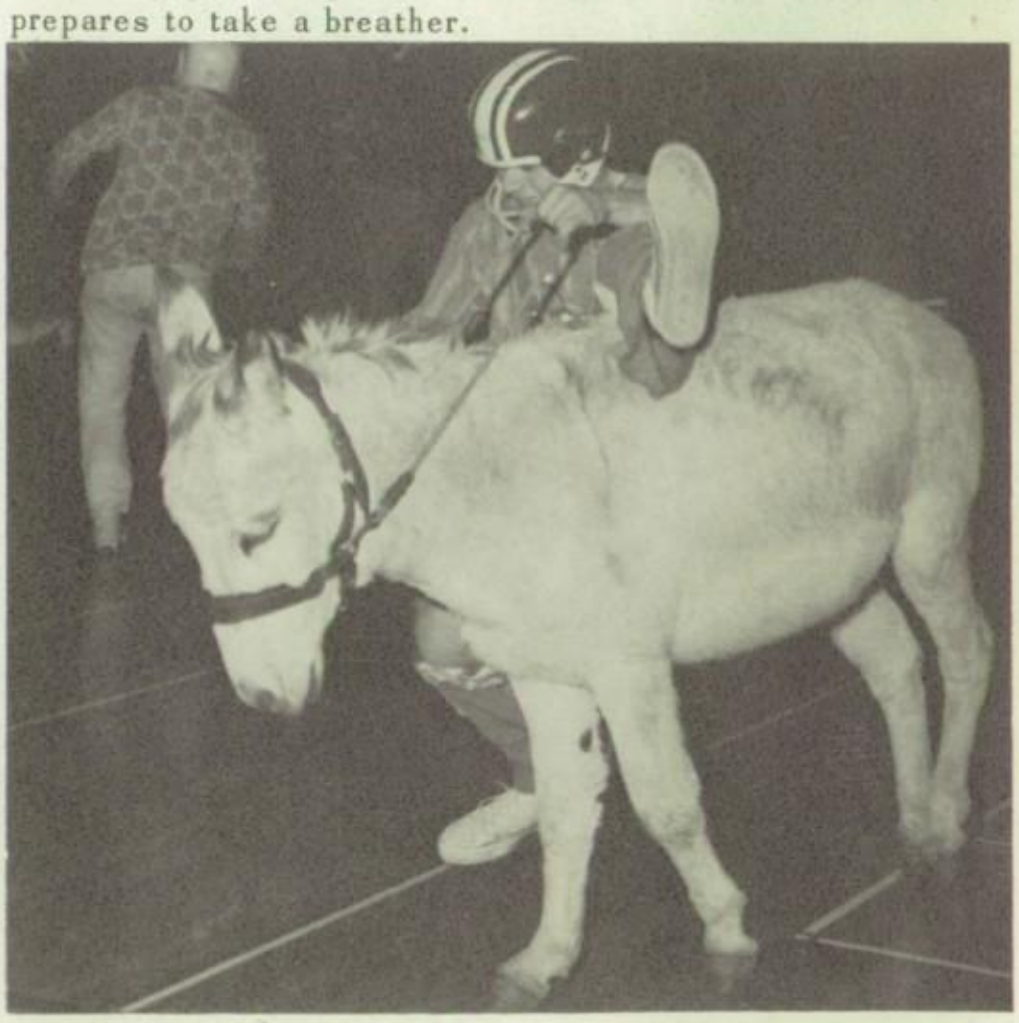


"How am I supposed to ride a donkey that way?" mutters Stretch Dyer.

Marshall Ross and "Sweetheart" combine forces for two points.



Alighting gracefully from his steed Jim Rokita (below) prepares to take a breather.



It Was Spring in January as 'Twilight

The highlight of any dance is the grand march and so it was at "Twilight Enchantment".

Admiring the dance programs (below) are Leslie Rebentich and Diane Wedhorn.

Mr. and Mrs. Black welcome Cindy McCreery to "Twilight Enchantment."

Enchantment' Captivated Happy Couples

"Twilight Enchantment" was presented by the junior class in the John Glenn High School Ballroom in January. Luxuriously decorated in a spring motif, the ballroom was filled with handsome couples. Serenaded by the Jack Gerald Band, these couples danced through the night. The couples lounged on the comfortable suites which were provided and wandered leisurely through a beautiful rose arbor.

The junior students had labored many hours to realize their prom. Christmas cards and supplies were sold to finance it. Many hours were spent to create the romantic spring atmosphere. Talents of advanced Wood and Plastic students were donated to constructing a large rose arbor.

As are most things the Class of '67 attempts, "Twilight Enchantment" was a magnificent success. Honored guests at the junior prom were the John Glenn High School administrative staff and parents.

John Glenn does not have the standard conservative administrators; Principal Frank Higgins proved to be the life of the party at Grand March time.

It was an amusing and entertaining evening that all who attended hated to see end.

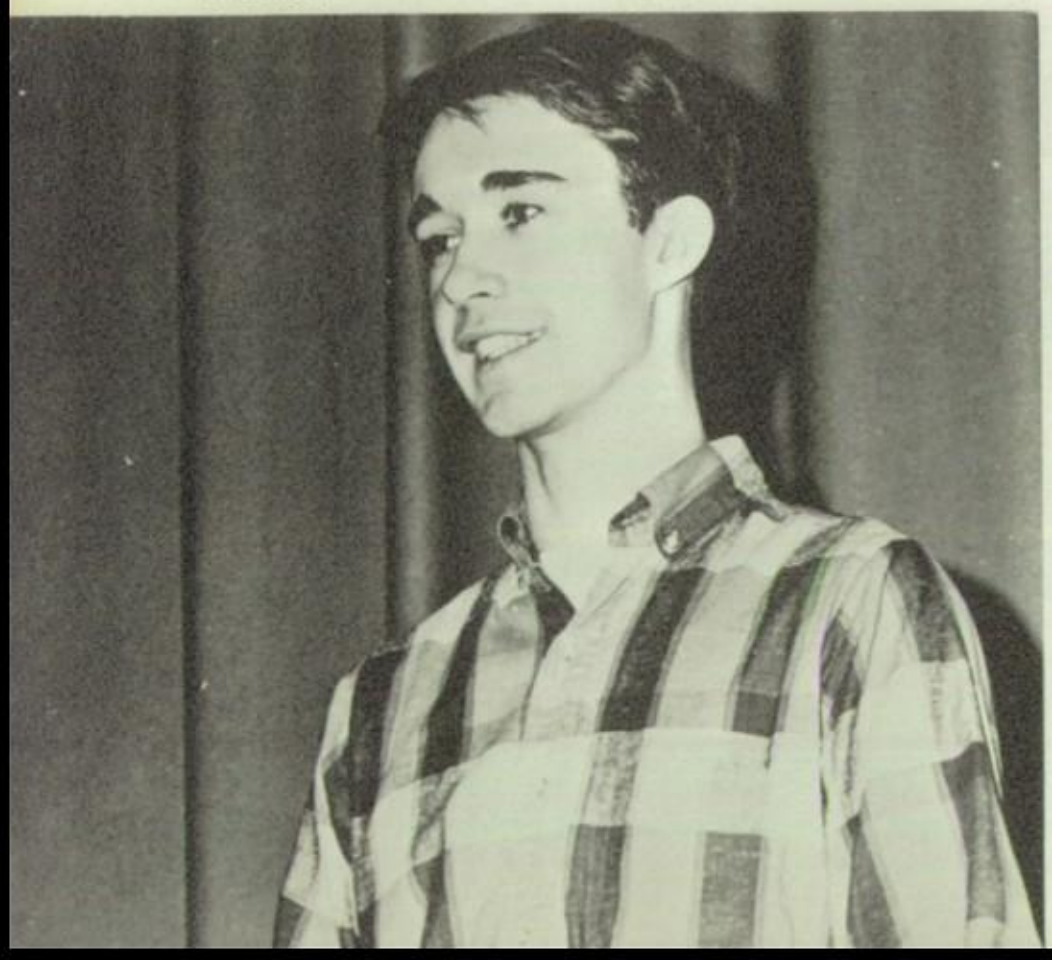
Debaters Did Well, Not Only in Matches,

Like any interschlastic activity, debate has rules which Mr. Dyer (above) explains to the audience at the Rebuttal Cup Contest. Mark Wagner (below) reads a humorous selection from Uncle Remus' Tar Baby for the school forensic contest.



Vince Smith and Elwin McKellar, the Varsity negative team, plan their strategy for the Rebuttal Cup Contest.

The debating abilities of John Glenn High School students are amazing. John Glenn holds a proud record to support this boast.

An opportunity to display this talent publicly on 'Quiz 'Em On The Air' was warmly received. Chris Nichols, Judy Zanarini, Dale Greaves, Clarence Hasselbach, and Sam Wotring were selected to represent John Glenn. Their opponents were from Wayne Memorial High School, John Glenn's sister school. The teams were well-matched, and it was a close contest. Wayne Memorial surged ahead at the last moment to earn the win.

John Glenn High School and Wayne Memorial High School were again matched in a debate contest for the coveted Rebuttal Cup, a sort of "Little Brown Jug." Chris Nichols and Judy Zanarini debated the affirmative and Elwin McKellar and Vincent Smith were the negative team. Wayne Memorial again matched John Glenn's abilities, for the debates ended in a tie, the odds of which were about 8,000 to 1.

In the Northwest Suburban Association, John Glenn swept the competition with a season record of nineteen victories and one loss. Mr. Tim Dyer, the coach, was very proud and expects the debate team to improve its record next year.

Crowned 'Mr. Rocket' at Dance

There are many schools whose student bodies elect an outstanding athlete to be honored for his athletic record in accord with the school's appreciation of his athletic ability. Although John Glenn High School does not usually blindly follow the pack, the merit of this practice is obvious, and a John Glenn High School Mr. Rocket, 1966, was elected.

The candidates were Bill Adkins (football, swimming, golf), Bill Bable (basketball, basebal), Dick Drury (track, football, baseball), Nelson Ellison (basketball, baseball, cross country), Chuck Finfrock (football, wrestling, golf), Ron Kuban (football, track), Bill Kubitskey (football, track), Pete Mathison (football), Mark Wagner (tennis, cross country), Lenny Wells (basketball, football, baseball) John Wood (football, baseball, wrestling), and Jerry Young (football, track, wrestling).

The cheerleaders collected penny votes for their particular candidates in gay canisters.

It was a beaming Lenny Wells who was crowned Mr. Rocket by his equally happy sponsor, Chris Nichols.

The funds raised from a "Chomp and Stomp" and the contest are to be used for cheerleading activites.

Cheerleaders Chris Nichols, Cheryl Merglewski, Jeanette Horton, and Kathy Murtha count the money during the Mr. Rocket contest.

for Mr. Dyer

The senior boys demanded a chance to recoup their loss to the male faculty in the donkey basketball game. A rematch would also give a legitimate channel to revenge of two years of punishment by schoolwork. The rematch was sponsored by the Class of '66.

The 1966 Student Faculty Basketball Game proved to be a bigger success than the previous year's game. This game was faster than the donkey basketball game, for the players were on foot; therefore, they did not need to worry about opposition from their donkeys, in addition to that of the other team.

The teams were evenly matched; it was a close game, with the senior boys and the male faculty alternating the lead.

The teams were cheered on by a record crowd led by bouncing cheerleaders who had volunteered their talents.

It was a particularly tense game, and the tension was heightened by a small wager: Jim Pettit, captain of the senior team and president of the Class of '66, bet Mr. Dyer, captain of the faculty team and sponsor of the Class of '66, a cream pie, in the face, that the seniors would be victorious. The senior boys did not do as well as Jim Pettit had expected. He was presented with a cream pie from Mr. Dyer ala Soupy Sales.

Senior Class president Jim Pettit (above) smiles through the pie whcih only proves that seniors are always good loosers. Pondering over who will make the first move toward the ball, (below) is Chuck Finfrock and Mr. Schuster.

'South Pacific'

Highlighted a Year of Accomplishment

Emile (Marshall Ross) gives fatherly advice to his native children.

This year, John Glenn High School presented its first musical, Rodger's and Hammerstein's musical adaptation from Tales of the South Pacific, "South Pacific." It was through the efforts of all of John Glenn High School that such a fine performance was shown. The music department, both vocal and instrumental, labored to master their respective music. The choreography was directed by Evelyn Valentine with fine results. The drama students displayed great enthusiasm for their roles. The art department solved the many problems created by the tropical setting, and the graphics students assisted in the production of advertisements, tickets, and programs. It was only through the combined and co-ordinated enthusiasm of the entire John Glenn High School that "South Pacific" was a success.

The 'Sweet'

Mr. Shields (below) holds up a Sleepy Dog which some lucky student will win in the Magazine Drive.

Magazine Assembly Entertained Students

In order to provide summer-study programs in foreign nations to foreign language students, John Glenn High School senior student council sponsored a magazine drive through Quality School Plan, Incorporated last year. The students worked feverishly to exceed their goal; the magazine drive was successful.

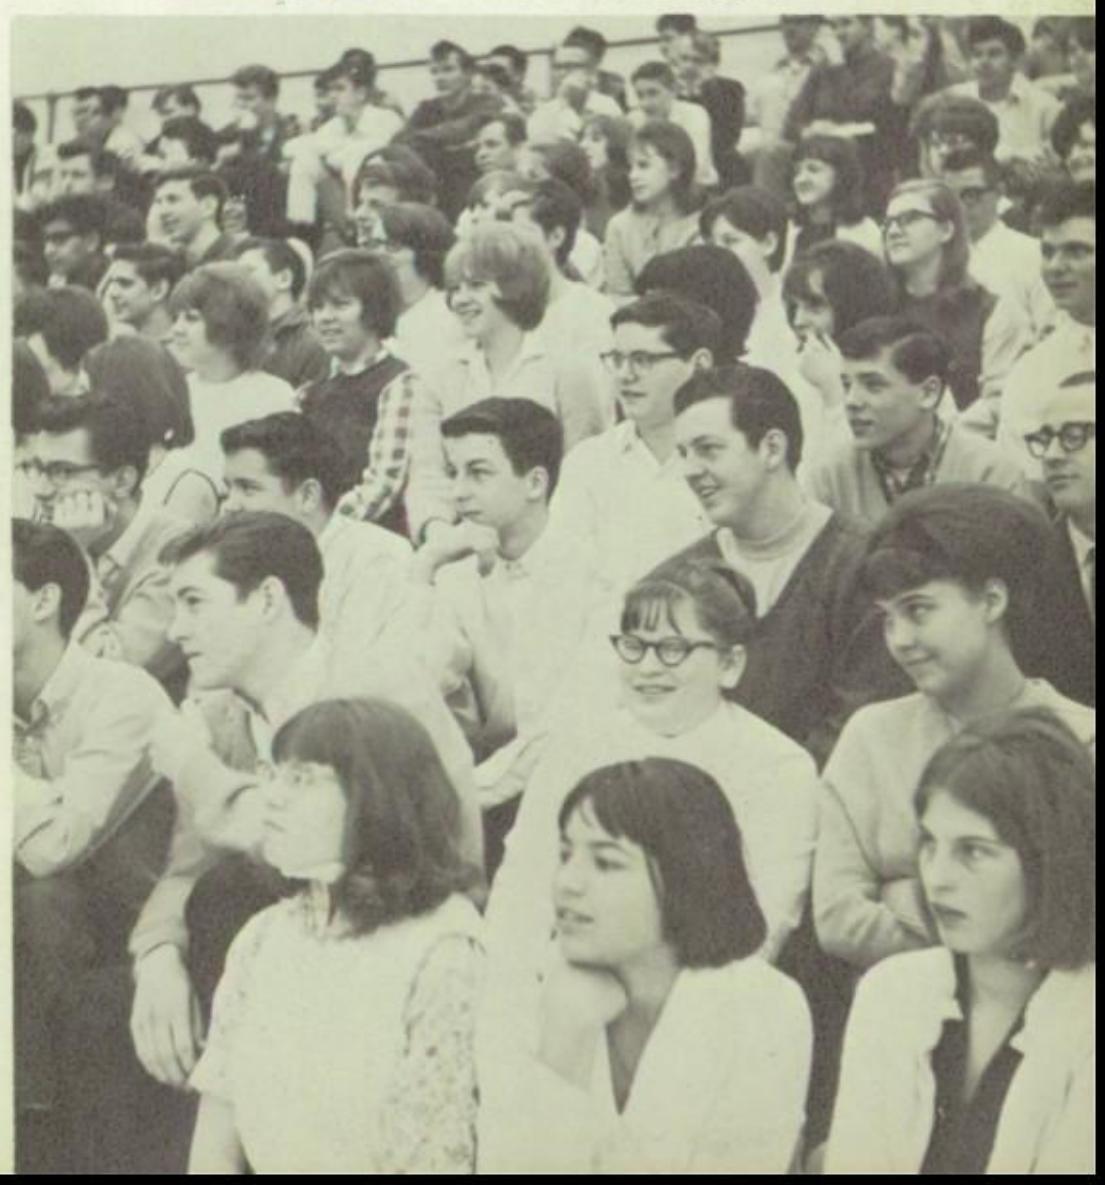
Although the Wayne Community School District, following the program initiated by John Glenn, is financing the summer-study programs this year, the senior high school student council was in need of finances for initial and experimental programs. Many students participated in the drive and were encouraged by a daily Treasure Chest drawing and prizes for exceptional salesmanship.

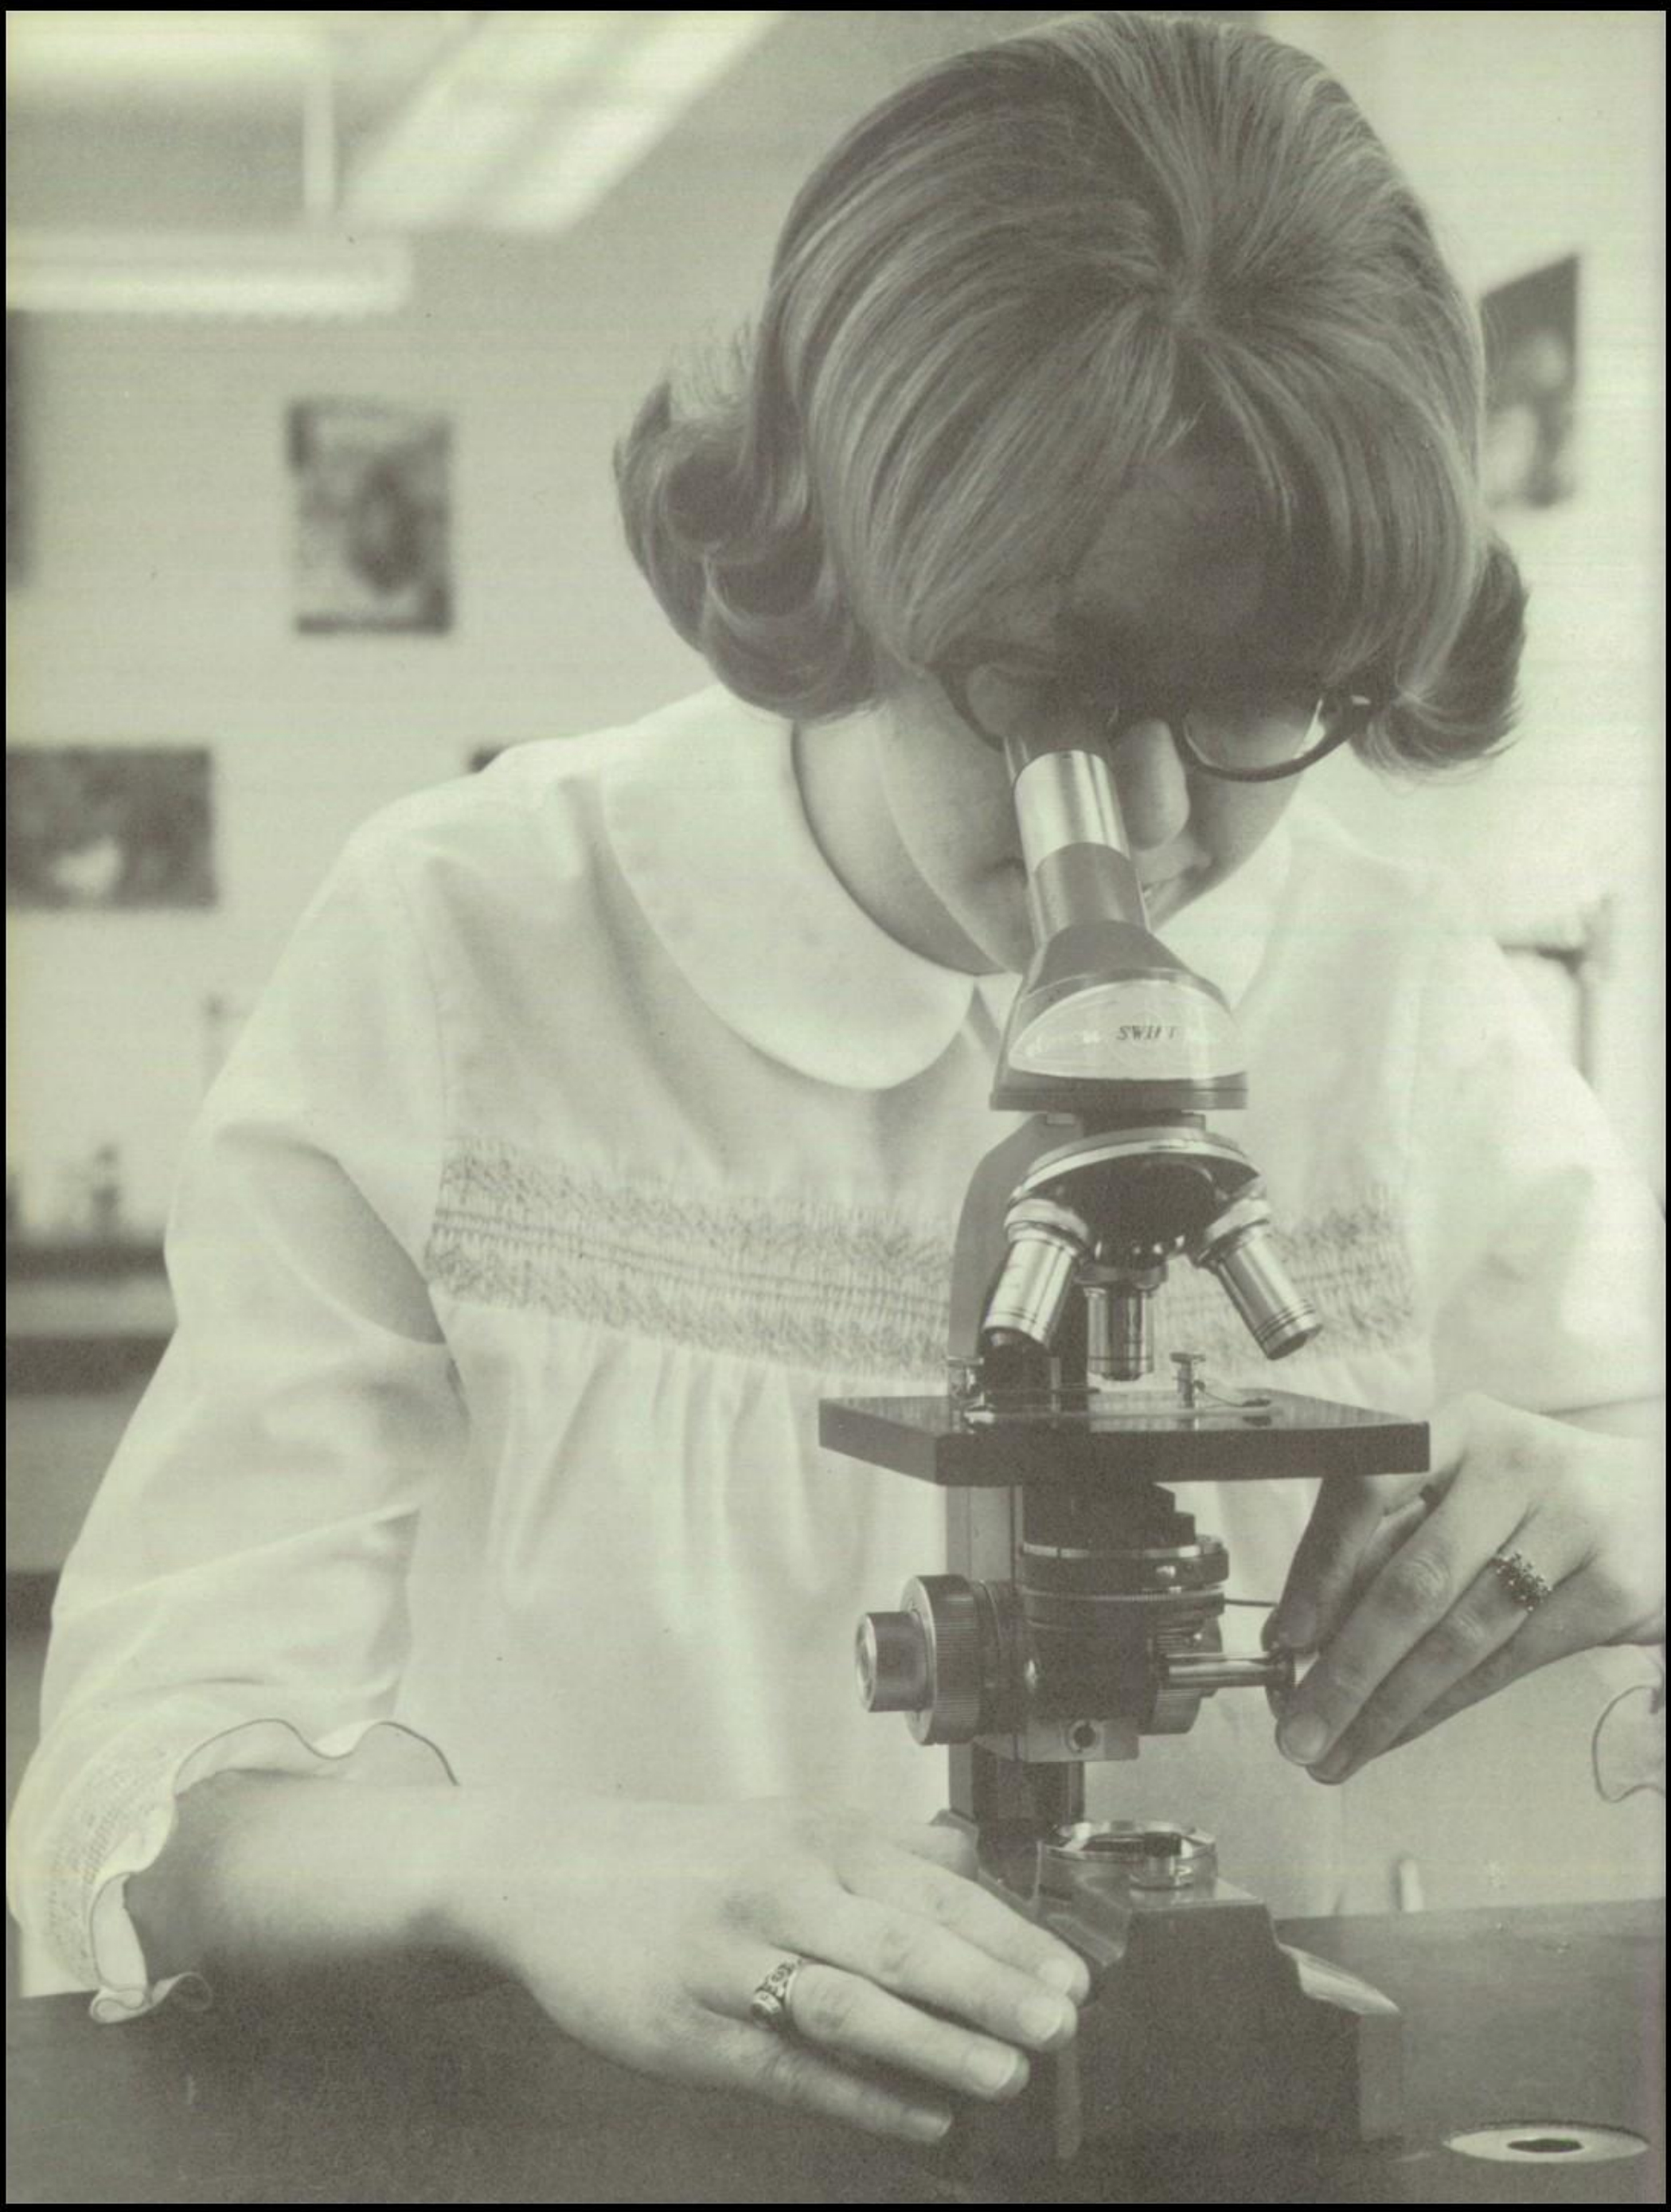
Again, Charlene Immerfall was the school's top salesperson. She received a portable television for her efforts.

More than 40 prizes were given to other good sales records.

This year's drive was almost as successful as last year's drive. It seems that the senior high school student council has discovered a gold mine.

Students of John Glenn appear to be quite interested in the Magazine Drive and its rewards.





John Glenn High School is one of the more advanced secondary schools in the area. Its faculty is distinguished; its administration is liberal; its curricula is progressive. John Glenn's quality is maintained by good co-ordination of educational programs and the mutual understanding and respect for each other held by the administration and faculty.

John Glenn High School caters to the individual rather than the mass; its student is not one face in hundreds, but an individual having specific needs and abilities. The faculty of John Glenn offers the opportunity for knowledge to all, so that students as individuals may realize their potential. The teachers' philosophy is supported and encouraged by the administration. Students have great respect for the intelligence of the faculty, for theirs is — the Face of Knowledge.

The Administration

John Glenn High School is fortunate to have an administration that is interested in its students. Glenn's administrative staff, led by Principal Francis A. Higgins, has worked hard to keep Glenn the efficient, organized institution that it is. The administration is attuned to the interests and activities of Glenn Students. It is the administration that maintains the orderly routine under which Glenn High School operates. The administrative staff has brought order to what would otherwise be chaos. The "Cabinet," a unique group composed of administrators, counselors, and department heads, was initiated by Mr. Higgins to provide an efficient method of communication and conference on policy and channel of administration. For their invaluable help and guidance to this year of John Glenn High School, the administrative staff must be congratulated.

Students often converse in the congenial atmosphere of the office.

10th grade counselor, Mrs. Lowery advises Steve Ashenberger with the understanding and patience which is necessary for all advisors.

Purpose: To Help Students

It is unusual for any student to go through a school year without needing the help, advice, or guidance offered by John Glenn High School's counseling body. Our counselors aid students and teachers in educational programs and conflicts. Advice on personal problems is readily obtained, and guidance to one's present and future may be found in the counselors. Mr. Cy Webber, eighth grade counselor, helps students to orient themselves to this secondary level to which they are new. Mr. John Purcell, ninth grade counselor, is a friend and confidant to his students. Mrs. Florence Lowery and Mr. Niel Straight, eleventh grade counselors, guide their young adults through this busy year, and Mrs. Bernadine Biebeshiemer, twelfth grade counselor, guides her students through the complexities of their last year in high school and aids in preparation for their future. The counselors work hand in hand with the faculty and administration. They are an indispensable group who give direction to their students and aid to their co-workers.

Aiding freshmen to become accustomed to high schoo l life is a tedious job, but Mr. Purcell, ninth grade counselor, enjoys his job.

Mr. Webber (above) 8th grade counselor, checks his schedule for daily appointments. Junior counselors (left) Mr. Stadler and Mrs. Groves confer on future activities for 11th graders.

Without Help

Aiding the administrative and counselling staff are clerks and secretaries. It is this body that is the guardian of this institution's efficiency. It is with these people that many responsibilities lie. They are the recording system, record keepers, etc. that keep Glenn High School running smoothly. Mrs. Helen Wheeler, Glenn High School bookkeeper, keeps monetary affairs in order and regulates the distribution of texts. The Glenn High School clinic also contributes to an efficiently run school.

Providing clinical assistance to a cut is Mrs. Ruth Owen, the nurse.

The Glenn High School library promises to be one of the most extensive in this school system. Under the direction of Mrs. Donna Balzarini and Miss Roberta Rose, John Glenn library has outgrown the "school library" classification. It is instead an Instruction Materials Center.

Available to students and faculty are carrels, for intense studies; a professional library, having manuals and information on a great assortment of occupations and vocations; a movie preview room, where the faculty may view films contributory or supplementary to their programs; and audio-visual aids, available through the audio-visual center supervised by Mr. Phil Wurzel, in addition to regular library facilities. Each part of the IMC is co-ordinated to enrich and extend the educational programs of Glenn High School.

Social Sciences

Social science is the study of human society and relations and institutions involved in man's existence and well-being as member of an organized community. In order to understand a society, influential factors in its history and geographical situation must be uncovered, for people do not exist, but live in relation to and under the influence of their history and environment.

To ensure knowledge of this affinity, social science classes are required throughout high school. The courses range from American History, a general class required of eighth grade students, to Political Science, mandatory for senior students.

In the advanced Political Science course, Humanities is introduced; it is a brief survey of the humanities; classic philosophy, religion, contemporary philosophy, music, and art.

John Glenn High School's social science department and chairman Timothy Dyer feel this sequential study of social science is most beneficial to its students. It is to the best interests of its students that the social science department is geared.

As head of the social science department, Mr. Tim Dyer is kept busy creating innovations for his department.

A well-rounded education in the English language is necessary to the modern individual. To be learned in English grammar and composition enables one to communicate with his fellow man and encourages freer self-expression. A knowledge of the nature of and appreciation of English literature enriches one's understanding of the universe and its peoples. The importance of an English education is emphasized in mandatory classes.

John Glenn High School's English department provides the receptive student with a perceptive education in the English language. English grammar, which has been studied throughout elementary school, is reviewed and further skill is developed in the early secondary grades, but as the student's creativity begins to surface, composition and English literature are emphasized. The student is encouraged in composition and appreciation of literature. As the student's interest increases, the nature and purpose of English literature is revealed. It is through this program that one receives the most valuable English language education.

Under the leadership of chairman Marvin Nochman, this program has been developed and executed by a well-trained, highly select group of teachers. Knowledge and appreciation of the English language is valuable education to modern man in his search for purpose and success in life.

Initiative

The science department of John Glenn High School is extensive. It ranges from physical sciences to physics programs and includes a planetarium, co-ordinated with the astronomy program. Mr. Darrel Mullinix is chairman of the science department. Through his expert leadership, this department has become well co-ordinated with the entire Glenn educational program. Programs are frequently presented in the planetarium under the direction of Mr. Dennis Sunal. The planetarium is also used to the advantage of the entire school district. An annual science fair is promoted to encourage scientific research and experimentation. Students are urged to enter exhibits for the enrichment of their education. Glenn's science department does not merely instruct its students, but encourages appreciation of and initiative experimentation in the sciences.

The Glenn High School mathematics department is a compound and complex organ. Among the offered courses are Elementary Algebra, Consumer Math, and Solid Geometry. An Advanced Geometry and Trigonometry Course is available to ambitious seniors, and Computer Programing is offered to Glenn students at Wayne Memorial High School's Computer Center. Under the direction of Mr. Eugene Domanke, the part mathematics hold in this modern, expanding world is stressed. The analytical process obvious in math is applicable to all fields and problems. The progressive programs provide for the full, sequential development of the students mathematical skills. The mathematics department is an integral part of Glenn High School's educational system.

Glenn students are offered French, German, Latin, and Spanish courses. To further the student's understanding and use of the language, history, customs and geological factors are considered. Visual aids and records are available through the Instructional Materials Center. Completing the program is the language laboratory where students are encouraged to listen to and speak the language more fluently. Appreciation of the languages is a primary function of the language department.

Home Ec Well- Equipped, Well Taught

Home economics assists young people in their personal life as well as developing an appreciation of the satisfaction of home and family living. The courses offered range from elementary Homemaking to Home and Family Living. These courses assist and guide the future homemaker in development of the basic skills and sensibilities necessary to maintain an organized home.

Home economics is not only a practical study, as represented by the cooking and sewing program, but it is also concerned with the psychological and sequential development of a good home and family life, which is the concern of Home and Family Living, offered to senior students. For those ambitious students desiring a career in home economics, advanced foods and/or advanced clothing courses are available.

John Glenn High School is fortunate to have an extensively equipped home economics department. The modern kitchens and sewing rooms are supplemented by a Home Management Center, where home economics students put their skills to practical use, for this department is co-ordinated with the entire educational program of John Glenn High School.

Students Gained Self-Confidence, Poise

Business Department chairman, Mr. Jim Linderman, checks a co-op student's work record.

Today's world necessitates a certain degree of business education, whether personal or vocational. Business education courses supplement the students' self-confidence.

Vocationally, intense courses are available to educate the student desiring a business career. A variety of courses are offered, from elementary Typing to Clerical Training and Principles of Management, to provide opportunities for the students' varying degrees of interest.

Cooperative Education programs are offered to seniors who wish to complement their academic business educations with an actual employment situation. Mr. James Linderman, chairman of John Glenn's business education department, and Mr. William Murphy, Office Occupation Co-ordinator, labors to co-ordinate all business education courses so that the student receives more than a strictly academic instruction.

The business education student senses achievement and direction in John Glenn's progressive program. A business education is available to any serious student, for it is a valuable and serious program in the best interests of its students.

Special Programs Used Teaching Specialists

Aiding freshman, Bill Jernigan (above) to read more effectively are reading consultants, Mr. George O'Brien and Mr. Ron Somers. Mrs. Joyal, special education teacher, goes over one of Bob Guynns' papers with him.

John Glenn High School's reading center is co-ordinated with the total educational program to insure steady development of reading skills. Mr. George O'Brien and Mr. Ron Somers are reading consultants. In some instances, the program has advanced to a consultative, almost tutorial, level.

The reading center fulfills its purpose: to provide sequential development of reading skills according to the individual reading requirements of its students.

John Glenn High School also has a program to aid students with special educational problems under the direction of Mrs. Joyal. This is essentially an experimental program.

JGHS's Physical Education Department

Recently, physical fitness has been stressed in local, state and national government. John Glenn High School has done its best to give its students the physical education that the nation's physical fitness standards require. John Glenn's program is not strictly physical but is a mental and physical program which stresses the development of habits and good sense, to gain and maintain physical fitness.

Individual development is insured by the variety of programs. In addition to the required physical education classes, elective courses, extra-curricular athletic participation, and intramural competition are offered. Development of individual physical co-ordination, sportsmanship, and team-sense are simultaneously promoted.

Physical education is indispensable to one's general education. Realization of this necessity guides John Glenn High School's physical education program. Programs and projects, from weight-lifting to golf, are constantly being initiated to give John Glenn students the best physical education opportunities possible.

Department Promoted Creativity

The unique feature of John Glenn High School's fine arts department is the remarkable abilities of its students. Talented painters, craftsmen, and dramatists fill the John Glenn fine arts department. An art show, which may become an annual affair, was presented by the art and crafts students. Sketches and paintings of rare talent, sculptures and jewelry of unusual quality were exhibited. Development of each student's interests and talents are provided for in the variety of art and crafts courses, ranging from Art 8 to Oil and Sculpture for the ambitious art student.

John Glenn's progressive art program is equalled by its drama and speech program. Two excellent productions were presented: "The Rich, Full Life" by Vina Delmar and Rodgers and Hammerstein's "South Pacific." Fine dramatic talents made each production a success.

The talents and success of John Glenn's drama students has ben more than matched by its speech students. Representative of John Glenn students' talent is the record of its forensics and debate team. In forensics district competition, in extemporaneous speaking, interpretative reading, declamation, etc., John Glenn High School displayed unequalled talent, placing in each division. John Glenn High School also boasts a league champion debate team, which holds an almost perfect record in state competition.

The fine arts department's educational programs are geared to develop the individual's peculiar talents or skills, and Glenn's administration is devoted to appreciation of the fine arts.

Drama instructor Mrs. Lois Tobin (above), informs Merle Bumstead on the necessary light shadings for a production.

Preparing themselves for the next scene (right) are South Pacific participants Marshall Ross and Elaine Radies.

Industrial Arts

The Industrial Arts Department is an important part of John Glenn High School.

Aimed at expansion into a technical school, a variety and intensity of courses are offered. The extended block classes, Auto Mechanics and Metal Technology, allow greater specialization and work experiences than in a one-hour class.

Some technical education is necessary in this modern world, and development of the student's sense of this necessity is the goal of John Glenn's industrial arts department. The courses, Auto Mechanics, Wood and Metal Technology, Graphic Arts, etc., provide ample opportunities for all students' skills to develop.

Finished projects of the Wood and Plastics, and Industrial Arts are frequently displayed, which promotes a feeling of achievement and satisfaction enjoyed by the industrial art students.

The department is geared to promote the importance and satisfaction available in a technical education. Under the direction of Mr. John Worlow, John Glenn High School's industrial arts department is growing into a school of technology.

Music Is a Universal

Band Director, Mr. David Wickham (above) provides stern but effective leadership. Practicing a selection (below) for the Tulip Festival are Concert Band members, Dianne Shelton, Sue Osborn, and Sharon Helmer.

The one who feels that readin', 'ritin', and 'rithmetic are all the education needed is a dull, unimaginative person indeed. Appreciation of the fine arts is an important part of a well-rounded education.

Mr. Wickham, director of the instrumental music department of John Glenn High School, teaches the importance of music to his students. In elementary school, the opportunity to play a musical instrument is offered to any student. It is a wise student who grasps this opportunity and continues in his ambition to be advanced to the concert band.

The instrumental music classes range from junior high school concert band to senior high school concert band and includes senior high school stringed instrument ensemble. All classes are elective. The classes include advancement of knowledge on a particular instrument and preparation for exhibitions of this advancement. Private lessons may be arranged through the music department.

Language at John Glenn High School

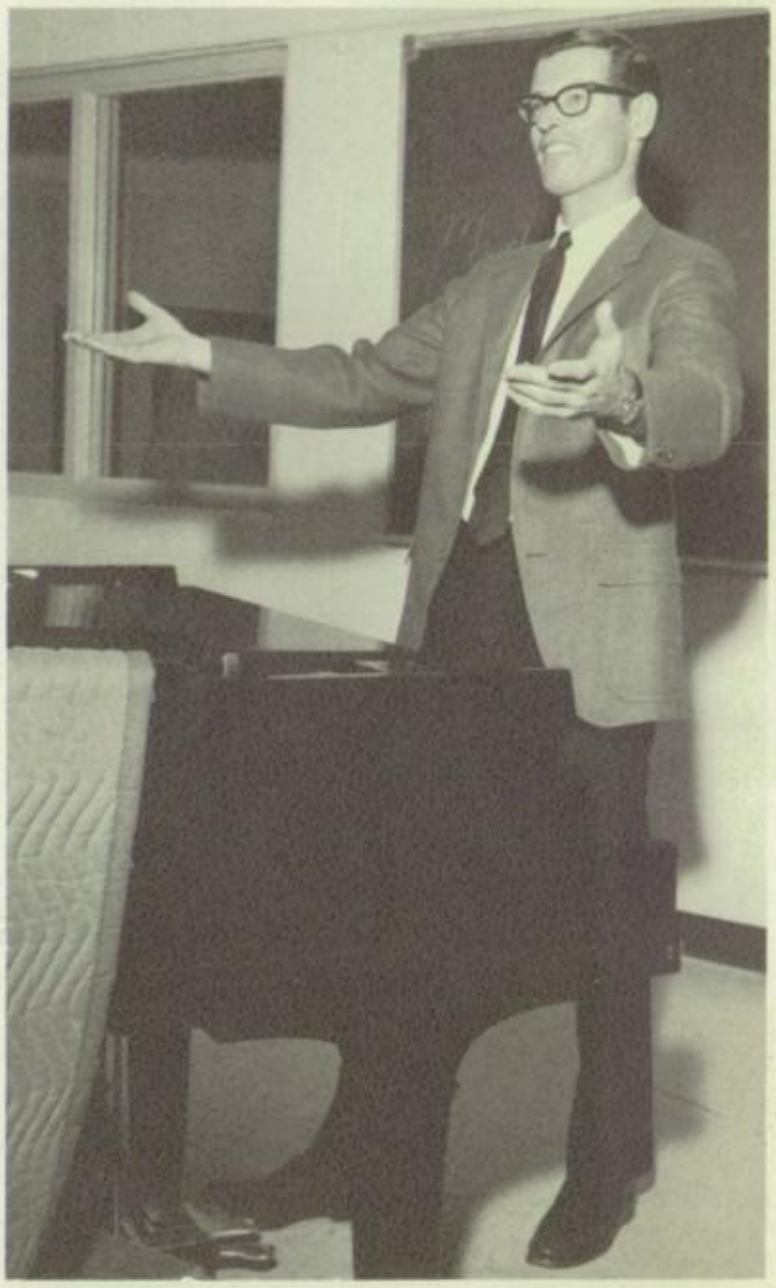
Few students realize the education they receive from a vocal music class. Music, being a form of art, is the expression of an experience, be it exultation, love, or sorrow.

Music also is an exemplification of history. Throughout history, man has expressed his conquests, expectations, and opinions in music. The chronological study of music is also the study of man's history and historical philosophies.

Music is an exact science. The study of the development of music from its early simple form to the complex study it is at present may be considered a study of the development of science. Music reflects history's every part.

Music is also for enjoyment and entertainment, which is generally the reason a student enrolls in a music class.

Mr. Bruce Graden, the John Glenn High School vocal music director, makes the classes as enjoyable and educational as possible. The classes, all of which are elective, range from 8th grade to Concert Choir, the elite of the vocal music department to which those students who have the desire and ability may be advanced.



M:. Bruce Graden, Vocal Music Director, leads the Concert Choir in song. Proud Concert Choir members (below) show off the new blazers.

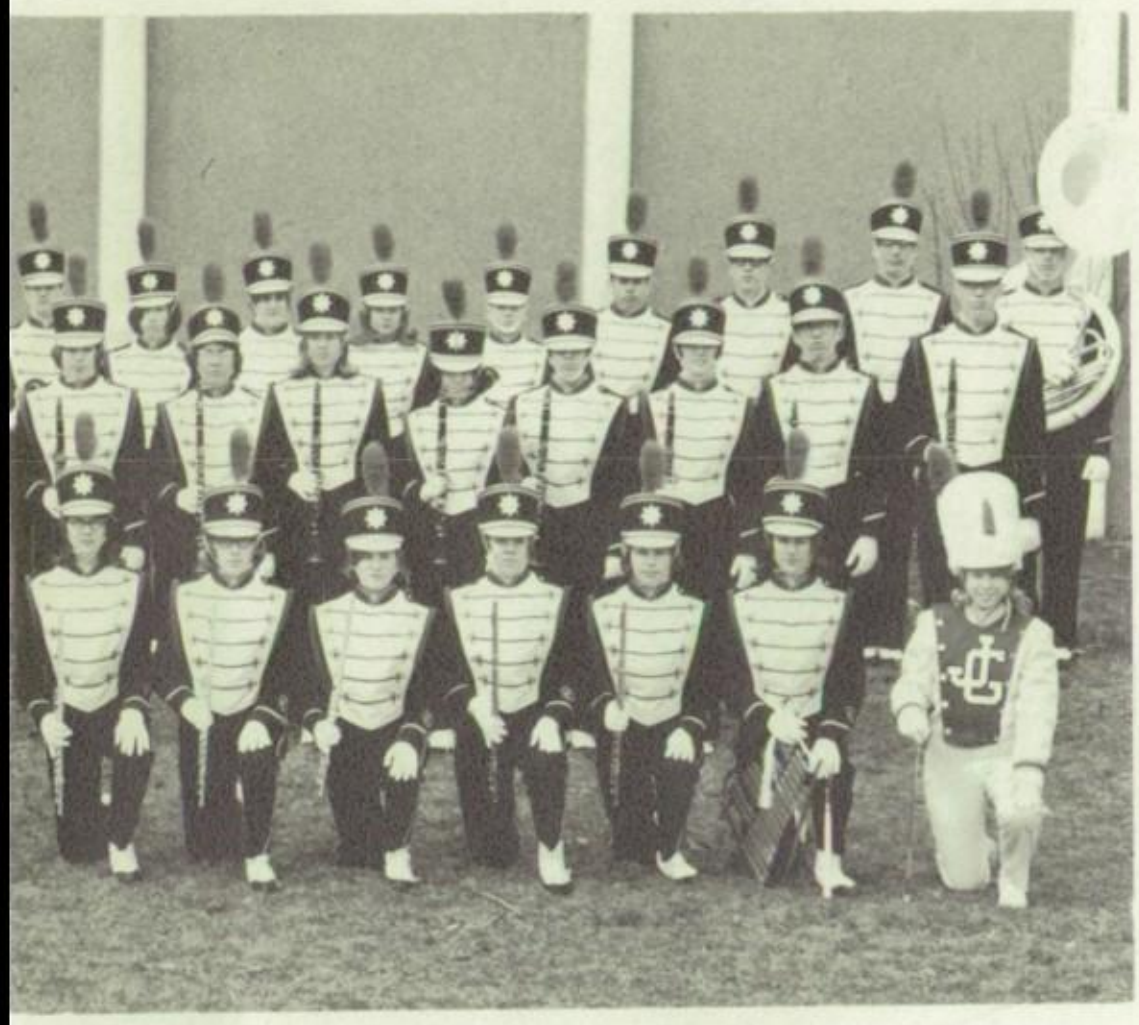
Their Music, Pep



Led by bouncing Sandy Rose, who was elected John Glenn High School drum majorette by an overwhelming majority, the marching band may be seen stepping, lively in their white spats, onto the football field and at parades. Hours of practice make these marches successful and bring invitations to perform at various community gatherings.

This year, in addition to halftime performances at all home games, the marching band strutted in Hamtramck's Christmas parade, United Nations Day parade in Nankin, and the Memorial Day parade in Wayne. The marching band was also honored with an invitation to the Holland Tulip Festival.

The marching band must be congratulated on its success and fame. Its practice hours are restricted to the class hours and it is with particular diligence that the students work to maintain the quality of the John Glenn High School marching band. More invitations for exhibition of this quality are expected to come next year.

Made Beautiful Music Together

For the advanced music student the most desired achievement is a chair in the John Glenn High School concert band. Those students who have proved their abiilty and desire to extend their musical experience and education may join the concert band.

The concert band, which is essentially the marching band with some additional musicians, is a busy organization. It is time-consuming, for all performances are played outside of classtime, and rehearsals are frequently after class, also.

The concert band plays at district schools' concerts, in addition to their own concerts. Its busy schedule included the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Festival at which it was awarded an overall two-rating.

The band's activities do not end in June, as all regular classes do, but continue through the summer. Summer classes are held at Camp Tanuga. The marching and concert bands earned money for their summer classes by selling candy.

Orchestra is Expected to Expand and Improve

John Glenn High School boasts a senior high school small stringed instrument ensemble, which is expected to grow into a full orchestra in a few years. At present, the ensemble travels to Wayne Memorial High School daily for classes with Wayne's orchestra. John Glenn's string ensemble participates in all activities of Wayne's orchestra as part of that orchestra.

Their only performance as a unit of John Glenn High School was in "South Pacific." The orchestra, which played for the musical was composed of John Glenn High School's concert band and string ensemble plus a few professional string-instrument musicians.

Next year, with the addition of promoted students, the string ensemble will have classes at John Glenn in preparation for their expansion into an orchestra.

The Concert Choir is the elite of the vocal music department. The members are hard-working and able.

Many years are spent in anticipation of membership. The students progress through the junior vocal music ranks with their sights on Concert Choir membership. Many members are former mixed chorus students.

Once acheiving membership, however, labor does not end. In addition to the time devoted to class period, extra-school hours are also used. Practice for improvement of voice and rehearsals for performances are frequently held during after school hours.

Added Quality

The Ensemble is a group of fifteen advanced music students who have been selected for their voice strength and blending quality. The Ensemble is frequently invited to perform at various schools' concerts, and their talents were commended at an Ensemble festival held at Wayne State University where they were rated "good".

The most popular vocal group at John Glenn High School is its barbershop octet. The octet specializes in novelty songs, which are enjoyed by the octet as well as its audience. The barbershop octet was honored with an invitation to perform at the Wayne Community Choral Concert.

The mixed chorus is a maturing and training class for students who wish to advance to the John Glenn High School concert choir. These students work hard to become capable of concert choir membership and perform at music functions.

The Class of '66 is the first graduating class of John Glenn High School. The Class of '66 has led the student body through two precedent-setting years. Under the sponsorship of Miss Wiedenbach, Mr. Dyer, and Mr. Sommerman, The Class of '66 has completed its high school years successfully. They have been helpful, and encouraging, and understanding, as the task demands. The Class of '66 will depart in June with mixed feelings. High school is security, and insecurity is an exhausting emotion, but the adult world is a challenge to the spirit. In this year, knowledge has been acquired, responsibiliites have been accepted, and maturity has been realized. The Class of '66 will face the future with assurance; theirs will be — the Face of Confidence.

Senior Class History

Arriving from an assortment of junior high schools and school districts, the Class of '66 first assembled as sophomores at Wayne Memorial High School. At that time, the student has no idea that they would soon be separated. At the end of the school year, it was announced that a third of the Class of '66 would have to attend the newly-built John Glenn High School the next year. Few students thought they would enjoy the change, for all had looked forward to graduating from the established alma mater, but all changed their minds after one short year at John Glenn High School.

The Class of '66 arrived at John Glenn an unorganized body. With much enthusiasm and the aid of the administration, the students established order. Elections were held to determine who would be taskmasters in organizing the junior class. It was the student body that designated John Wood in electing him president of the class. Sandi Phelps, Cathy Tajer, Ron Kuban, and Cheryl McLaughlin were elected vice president, secretary, treasurer, and publicity manager, respectively. Ron Kuban's term was completed by Karen Palmer.

Next on the organizing agenda was the selection of class emblem, motto, colors, and flower. A classwide election was held. The white carnation was chosen the class flower, and burgundy and white were chosen the class colors. An emblem created by Norm Logan and the motto "The Future Is Ours" were chosen class emblem and motto. Once this election was completed, the class proceeded to other important business: stocking the treasury. The Class of '66 set the financial ball rolling with their sale of concessions at all home basketball games. Other money-making projects were the Student-Faculty Basketball Game and sale of John Glenn High School mini-mascot troll dolls clad in the school colors: red, white, and blue. The Class of '66 also financed "The Mouse That Roared," John Glenn's first dramatic production. Most of the accumulated funds were used to produce the junior prom. "May Fantasy" was the social event of that year. The class was proud of the success of their prom.

Senior Class Met Often, Solved Problems,

The Class of '66 returned in the fall to discover they were only ten short months from graduation. The students have worked all year with this in mind. The seniors were particularly enthusiastic about the Homecoming Celebration, for it was the only one in which they could participate. The float, on which so much time was spent, unfortunately took only second place. Senior pictures then held the attention of the class. Many new haircuts were evident, and seniors practiced their smiles in every mirror. The seniors also learned that graduation is not cheap. Next was the ordering of graduation announcements. The class council spent many hours selecting an announcement that would be distinctly John Glenn. Caps and gowns were also ordered. The class council suddenly realized they would need to enlarge their treasury if the Class of '66 was not to leave John Glenn in the red. A Donkey Basketball Game was quickly arranged. This game was an amusing activity which was attended by the entire student body and a financial success for the seniors. The Student-Faculty Basketball Game, which was a profitable activity the year before, was repeated. The senior boys again played the male faculty and lost. The crowd that the game attracted were attributed to the presentation of the consolation prize, a pie in the loser's (Jim Pettit) face. With only two months until graduation, the Class of '66 organized "The Dance." Presented at the Glenn Gras, "The Dance" was an informal affair and the most lucrative of the concessions. Plans for Senior Week, which had begun in the fall, were placed in high gear. With the co-operation of the administration, which wishes the first graduation to be memorable, the senior prom, banquet, etc., were organized. The senior prom, entitled "Misty Moonlight," was held in the Grand Ballroom of the Veterans Memorial Building. The senior banquet was held at McKenny Hall of Eastern Michigan University. Giftatory, an unusual activity, was also held during Senior Week. Senior Week concluded with Honors Convocation, Baccalaureate Services, and Commencement. It was a week for exultation and tearful remembrances. The Class of '66 are now making their way in the modern world.

Throughout a student's school life, high academic achievement is praised. Consistent scholastic accomplishment is rewarded in a student's senior year by the presentation of an honors diploma.

Many students work hard during their high school years with that goal in mind. There are others that simply do their best without regard to the pleasant reward. Both types of students deserve acknowledgement.

There are three graduations of honors diplomas: Cum Laude, (with honors), Magna Cum Laude, (with great honor), and Summa Cum Laude, (with highest honor).

The students receive honor points for every grade earned in credit classes during their three high school years.

Extra honor points are awarded for outstanding performances in advanced-track classes. If a student earns 54 honor points, he receives a Cum Laude diploma; 60 points earns a Magna Cum Laude diploma and a Summa Cum Laude requires 66 honor points. A student may have great capacity in creative or practical fields. Distinguished achievement in the arts or sciences are also rewarded at honors convocation.

Rushing eagerly through the corridors of John Glenn High School are the undergraduates. They are hurrying to their classes, clubs or committee meetings, or to extracurricular athletic activities. They are also hurrying through their undergraduate years and they will soon be seniors eagerly awaiting graduation.

To many, the undergraduate years are more fun and more educational than the senior year. The senior year is hectic, with preparation for, and the tensions and pressures created by, graduation. The undergraduate years are less tense. The students can enjoy their classes without being constantly plagued by their grades. The undergraduates can participate in more extracurricular activities, and they do not realize the proximity of their emergence into the adult world. However, every undergraduate year is spent in anticipation of the next year. The undergraduate is — the Face of Anticipation.

Their Drive Put the Juniors on Top

Junior Class Representatives and Officers

Nancy Smith is the energetic president of the equally energetic Class of '67, and is the personification of the bouncing, yet determined, spirit of the Junior Class. The juniors seem to have an unending drive, for they are continually undertaking projects which, at first sight, seem unsurmountable.

The Class of '67 started this year by winning first prize for their float in the Homecoming Parade. Much time and effort was put into the construction of their award-winning float.

The same zest was displayed by the junior students in their Christmas card sale, in which the Class of '67 had an extra incentive; their junior prom was to be financed by these profits. Then, energies were turned toward the junior prom. "Twilight Enchantment" was a fine production, a credit to the efforts of the Class of '67.

Mr. Lee Black, Mr. Lou Minkoff, and Mr. David Wickham, the sponsors, are very proud of their class' successes, and are confident that the class will be equally successful in their senior year. The Class of '67 is an energetic organization, typifying the spirit of John Glenn High School.

President Nancy Smith prepares an agenda for a junior class meeting.

Watch Us Move Up, Said Sophomores

Sophomore Class Representatives and Officers
ROW 1: Phyllis McClure, Beth LeBaron (Treas.), Karen DeLuca (Corr. Sec.), Sue Reitz (Pub. Mgr.), Tami Brown (V. Pres.), Darryl McLaughlin (Pres.), Vince Smith, Chuck Walker, Joe Schaefer. ROW 2: Debbie Lally, Cindy Balmer, Karla Press, Linda Nielsen, Marlyn Matero, Sue Phillips, Sydney Neal, Sue Reynolds, Judy Mireles.

The Class of 1968 is newly organized. It is fortunate to be guided by Mrs. Lawry, Mr. Bryant, and Mr. O'Neill, who are experienced and intelligent sponsors. The sophomore students placed their confidence in Darryl McLaughlin as president of the Class of '68. Their vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and publicity manager are Tammi Brown, Phyllis McClure, Beth LaBaron, and Sue Tietz. It is these people who have set the Class of '68 on its feet.

Their immediate concern is the accumulation of money. There is no present need for funds, but they know it is only two short years until graduation when funds are quickly dissipated. Bake sales have been their financial mainstay. Cookies and cupcakes baked en masse by the class are sold to the hungry student body. The sales have been very successful.

The Class of '68 has had a very good year. It is a well-co-ordinated organization with historical and financial status; it has started its high school years with a bang and gives every indication of continued success.

The students of John Glenn High School might seem to be overwhelmed by the demands of their schoolwork, but school, to most students, is more than lectures and homework. The school imparts knowledge, of course, but it also strengthens character and provides recreation.

Clubs contribute particularly in this respect. Through clubs, students learn sociability and responsibility, enhance their knowledge with interest, and have fun.

Clubs are usually formed around a mutual interest, such as language, sport, or hobby. The clubs at John Glenn High School range from Business Club to Art Club and Thespians.

These clubs provide educational lectures for advancement of knowledge, opportunities to exercise talents, and social gatherings, to promote social graces.

The student is most aware of the fun in clubs, for it gives relief to his educational tensions and pressures, and John Glenn's clubs fulfill their primary function well. Clubs are — the Face of Sociability.

and Productive Group

For the second year, Karen Moorehead has headed the senior high school student council. With her capable leadership, the student council has become the most active and highly-organized student institution at John Glenn High School.

The student council acts as a co-ordinator of its three classes, director of its entire student body, and channel of communication between the administration and its students. In this year, the student council has sponsored: the Homecoming Celebration, co-ordinated the sophomores, juniors, and seniors in the organization of the parade and dance; the second annual magazine drive, with the participation of the entire student body; and the Glenn Gras, for financial advancement of its clubs and classes and the enjoyment of its students.

Mike Catanzarite, Student Council Treasurer.

Junior High Student Council Got Feet Wet

The junior high school student council, while not as active as the senior high body, since its students are occupied with adjusting to the high school atmosphere and pace, does manage to sponsor activites.

The students elected Bob Dankert as their council president. Under his leadership, the junior high school student council has taken a big stride forward.

Championship for JGHS

The John Glenn High School debate team competed in four leagues simultaneously: the Northwest Suburban, the I-94, State, and Metropolitan Leagues. John Glenn debaters scored well in all four leagues. Debaters Chris Nichols and Judy Zanarini, affirmative, and Vincent Smith and Elwin McKellar, negative, won the Northwest Suburban League debate championship for John Glenn. The I-94 League is unusual, for it is not competitive. The debaters rate their opponents, instead of the debater being rated by judges. John Glenn High School debaters rated very well in this league. In the State League John Glenn won 75% of all its debates which won for the school a plaque. The debaters did equally well in the Metropolitan League.

As the competitive debate system ends, forensics competition begin. Forensics range from declamation to interpretive reading. The John Glenn High School forensics competitors have been successful. Chris Nichols, girls extemporaneous speaking, and Karen Moorehead, interpretive reading competing in the regional exhibitions.

Mrs. Kelly, sponsor, tells German Club officers, Jack Dankert (v. pres.), Gary Holland (sgt. at arms), Carol Bosell (sec.), Bob Dingman (treas.), and Diana Davis (pres.) about her foreign travels.

For those students who are interested in the German language and the homeland of that language, the German Club fills a need. Sponsored by Mrs. Kelly, a native of Germany, the club provides interesting information about Germany, opportunities to exercise knowledge of the German language, and social activities of German attitude.

The president of the club, Diana Davis, was fortunate to have studied in Germany the previous summer, and has graciously related her experiences with German language, people, and life.

From various speakers, films, and student projects, much is learned about German history, customs, and way of life. Although, the club was formed about the language, all aspects of the German people and Germany are encompassed.

Latin Club Became Junior Classical League

Appreciation of, and education in, classical languages is promoted in the Junior Classical League. John Glenn High School's Latin Club has been incorporated into the local chapter of the National Junior Classical League.

Those students having studied a classical language for one year or more are eligible for membership. Latin is the only classical language offered at John Glenn. Mrs. Betty Lawry, the club sponsor, exhibits many artifacts of the classical era and is a font of classical information.

To enhance appreciation, some holidays are celebrated in classical fashion. Saturnalia, relating to the modern Christmas, was celebrated by a banquet given by the Junior Classical League. A sumptuous buffet was laid, and members, lounging in togas, were waited upon by newly-inducted members; will not soon be forgotten. Appreciation of the classical life was increased by the Saturnalia celebration.

Discussing the Pater Noster are Latin Club officers, Carrie Knowles (sec.), Vince Smith (v. pres.), Gail Kier (pres.), Mrs. Lowry, (sponsor), Connie Zigler (hist.), and Sue Schleicher (treas.).

The French Club Enlightened and Delighted

French Club officers Barry Rowe (treas.), Donna Hine (sec.) Sharon Helmer (hist.), Chris Nichols, (v.pres.), Sue Osborn (pres.), and Judy Zanarini (pub. mgr.) plan the French club banquet.

Mrs. Blank is the sponsor of the John Glenn High School French club. Its officers are Sue Osborn, president; Chris Nichols, vice-president; Donna Hine, secretary; Barry Rowe, treasurer; Sharon Helmer, historian; Eric Denial, sergeant-at-arms. Those students who are, or have been, enrolled in a French class are eligible for membership.

The French club does not limit its interests to the French language alone. Geography and its influence on history; history and its influence on customs; customs and their influence on language are also a part of the picture.

The John Glenn High School French club discovers the enjoyment in their language. Learning a language is educational; it may be either tedious or fun, depending on the students' attitude. The French club enlightens and delights its members.

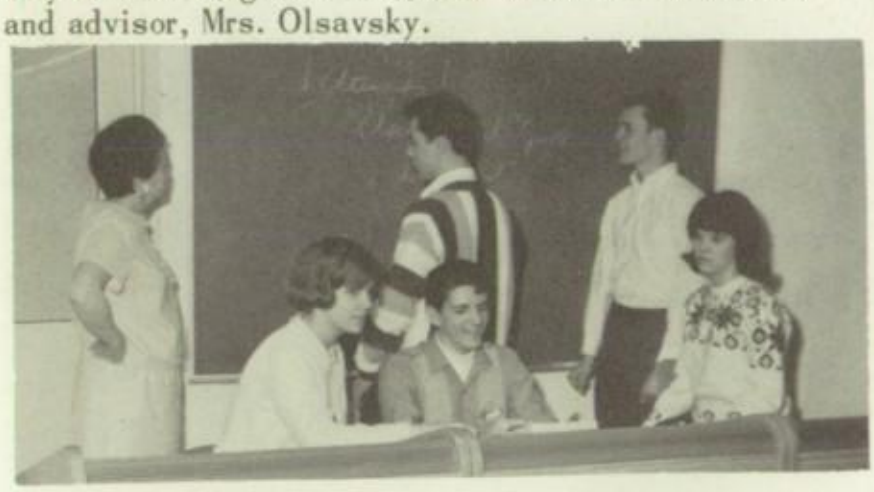
Another foreign language club is the Spanish Club, which is sponsored by Mrs. Olsavsky. The club promotes appreciation of the Spanish language from study of Spanish history, geography, customs, and people. Those students who display an interest in the Spanish language and have completed one year of Spanish are eligible for membership.

Spanish Club iniatiates (right) appear to be enjoying themselves. Planning a forthcoming meeting are Spanish Club officers Gail Kier (sec.), Dale Graves (pres.), Harold Podlassewski (v. pres.), Ray Glandon (sgt.at arms), Karen Moorehead (treas.) and advisor, Mrs. Olsavsky.



Drama Groups Presented Many Good

John Glenn High School is proud to house a chapter of the National Dramatic Honor Society. The members are known as Thespians, for the Greek poet, Thespis.

A student must act in at least one play to become a Thespian. The student earns points for his participation and actiing ability. An accumulation of nominal points makes the student eligible for membership.

The Thespians are devoted to the promotion of appreciation of the dramatic arts. Improvement of their abilities is also a consideration.

To promote participation in the dramatic arts, an honor Thespian is named each year. The honor Thespian is the senior student who has accumulated the most Thespian points. Honor Thespian is a great honor and coveted by all Thespians. Gloria Belden, president of the Thespians, is this year's award winner.

The club has not been financially profitable this year. It is hoped, in the future, that a scholarship may be awarded to a deserving or outstanding senior Thespian.

Co-Op Gave Business, Academic Training

Available to John Glenn High School students is a co-operative educational program. This program is co-ordinated with the students' academic program, generally with a business education.

Through this program, the students receive an opportunity to enter a field that they may be interested in and continue in after their secondary education ends.

Business Club officers, Sandi Rose (v. pres.), Cheryl Merglewski (sec.), Roni Schuster (pub. mgr.) and Cheryl Chiles (pres.) add the receipts of the Glenn Gras.

The unique Business Club is sponsored by Miss Joan Schumacher. The club is open to any student currently enrolled in a business course. Cheryl Chiles, Sandy Rose, Cheryl Merglewski, and Sharon Jenkins were elected president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively.

The Business Club was formed for the purpose of procuring information and opportunities for advancement in the business field. The business field, as related to the Business Club, includes secretarial and clerical work. Distribution and management fields are also included. It is the desire of the club to promote business careers and provide incentive and/or opportunities to advance business education. The Business Club is not primarily a money-making institution, but a service organization.

VCY Provided Religious Outlet

ROW 1: Linda Schrader, Nina Boyd, Jay Price, Jeanette Wilson, Linda Croff. ROW 2: Rose Snyder, Mel Straight, Carol Bosell, Janis Pokursky.

Attending a V.C.Y. executive board meeting are officers, Terry Kelley (soc. chr.), Sue Osborn (treas.), Carrie Knowles (v. pres). Mr. Straight (sponsor), Marcia Denial (soc. chr.) Ruth Perrin (sec.), Mr. Knecht (sponsor).

Voice of Christian Youth is a new organization at John Glenn. It is a campus life club for the betterment of teens. The VCY is a nationwide organization to promote the teen's appreciation and opportunity for a well-rounded life, stressing physical and mental health and the practical and spiritual aspects of teen life.

The John Glenn chapter was established this year by Mr. Ed Hinezon, a local director of the nationwide VCY, Mr. Mel Straight, the 10th grade counselor, and Mr. Paul Knecht, and is open to any boy or girl.

The VCY campus life club is not a money-making organization. It could be classified as a service club, since it promotes the welfare of all teens. In VCY, lectures on physical and spiritual education are heard, and literature on related subjects may be obtained.

The VCY gives moral direction to the students of John Glenn High School.

Honor Society Was 'Prestige' Group

The John Glenn High School chapter of the National Honor Society is the scholastic elite. A student must have earned forty honor points and have good character to qualify for induction.

The Honor Society frequently hosts guests who speak to the members on subjects related to academics or school, local, national, or international. John Glenn is fortunate to have several students, members of the Honor Society, who have participated in summer scholarship programs abroad, who may share their experiences with the other members.

The John Glenn High School chapter also wishes to be of service to its community. Application to provide tutorial service for a nominal fee to interested students has been submitted to the school board for consideration.

The Honor Society has been working feverishly all year so that a scholarship can be presented to a deserving, accomplished student.

Academic achievement is given prestige through the National Honor Society.

Planning the initiation of National Honor Society are officers, Clarence Hasselbach (V. Pres.), Karen Baxter (Tres.), Sue Greaves (Sec.), and Diana Davis (Pres.).

All those students of John Glenn High School who have earned a varsity letter in any field and are sponsored by a present member are eligible to membership in the Varsity club. It was decided that the club would be limited to male, athletic letter-winners.

The Varsity club is understandably active and very successful financially. Most of the hard-earned funds are used to benefit the athletic department, such as purchasing weight-lifting accessories and jackets for all the coaches.

The club is a vigorous organization, but the members are not lacking recreation. To cap Varsity club activities, a club-sponsored, teacher-supervised canoe trip was taken by all club members. This trip is expected to be an annual affair. In the future, presentation of a Varsity club scholarship will be considered. In all probability, the scholarship will be awarded to a club member who exhibits leadership, responsibility, and a desire to continue his education.

The Exponents Is Haven for Genius

John Glenn High School Math Club, the Exponents, enjoys mathematics. Of course, the major purpose of this club is to further mathematical education. The Exponent's treat mathematics not as a dull, purely utilitarian science, but as a channel of fascinating and amusing experimentation.

Many fascinating, mathematically-oriented discussions can be overheard when members of the Exponents gather: a conversation concerning the exhibition and demonstration of a computer; a three-demensional tic-tac-toe game played by the computer. The Exponents also display appreciation of high mathematical abilities, in the form of a substantial scholarship they hope to award to some deserving math student, perhaps not this year, but as soon as they are better established.

They vow that mathematical genius shall not go unnoticed.

Math club officers, Cheryl Love (Tres.), Clem Hasselback (Pres.) Chris Lund (Sec.), and Wanda Post (Pub. Mgr.) prepare to give a club demonstration in the planetarium.

Future Nurses Performed Charitable Deeds

Planning a field trip to a near-by hospital are Fu ure Nurses officers, Cheryl McLoughlin (treas.), Wanda Post (pub. mgr.) Gail Kier (pres.), Ellen Shro pshire (v. pres.), and Mrs. Owen (s ponsor.).

The Future Nurses of America is a nation-wide service organization devoted to promoting appreciation and knowledge of the nursing profession. John Glenn High School is proud to have its nurses group be a chapter in the Inter-Council of Future Nurses Clubs sponsored by the Michigan League for Nursing.

The club is directed by Mrs. Ruth Owen, John Glenn High School's nurse, and is open to anyone interested in the nursing profession or related fields. Frequently, guest speakers talk to the members on subjects from mental illness to nursing schools. Field trips to nearby hospitals and nursing homes afford the membership the opportunity to gain practical knowledge. Christmas presents for two institutionalized retarded children and a large Easter basket for a convalescent home are some of the charitable services performed by John Glenn High School's Future Nurses Club.

The Future Homemakers of America is a national organization for conscientious girls. John Glenn High School's chapter is sponsored by Miss Carol Gaffney. Any girl who is interested in home economics or wants to participate in more activities in the home economics area, may join the FHA. The members are particularly conscious of the responsibilities and indispensibility of the homemaker. The FHA was invited to visit classes and tour the campus of Eastern Michigan University; the FHA was the guest of the Home Economics club of EMU. The FHA also sent delegates to the FHA State Convention.

The members of this very active organization spent many hours in preparation for the "Halloween Howl", the Halloween costume dance. The FHA also designed and made the costumes for "The Rich Full Life" and "South Pacific", a monumental task which was easily accomplished by the FHA. The FHA is a vigorous organization whose projects are not only helpful but appreciated by John Glenn High School.

Discussing future plans are officers, Janet Williams (rep.), Corinne Papinchak (hist.), Mary Margaret Wise (sec.), Margaret Blevin (v. pres.), Miss Gaffney (advisor), Beth Cooper (pres.), Mrs. Klay (advisor), Nancy Stevens (song-leader), Helen Horst (parl.), Nancy Kasmier (treas.).

Future Teachers officers, Kathy Iller (treas.), Linda Long (parl.), Joan Esche (sec.), Vince Smith (hist.), Karen Moorehead (v. pres.), Robbi Ruth (pres.), Mr. Ramage and Mrs. Gray (advisors), discuss plans for the art mobile.

This year, a new club was formed at John Glenn High School. A Future Teachers of America club was formed. Mrs. Betty Gray and Mr. Richard Ramage volunteered to sponsor the organization.

All students who intended to enter the teaching profession or related fields were invited to join. A great number of students requested membership, which was a great compliment to the teaching profession and to the faculty of John Glenn High School in particular.

Order was brought to the club, as officers were elected. Robbie Ruth was chosen president; Karen Moorehead, vice-president; Joan Esche, secretary; Kathy Iller, treasurer; Linda Long, parliamentarian; Vince Smith, historian. The Future Teachers of America club was not active this year, for organization consumed the few months of its existence. Next year, it is expected to be one of the more active clubs at John Glenn.

Art Club Talent Was Widely Displayed

Any student who is interested in the visual arts should join the John Glenn High School Art club. It is a small club, for the visual arts are not as yet widely appreciated. The Art Club promotes the appreciation of the visual arts. Most of the members are students who are interested in further developing their art creativity. Many of their art objects, ranging from modern sculpture to traditional portraits, have been displayed at John Glenn and at the art shows in which John Glenn participates, such as at Westland.

Exhibitions of this type are part of the drive for more appreciation of the fine arts initiated by the school administration. The Art club is sponsored by Miss Sue Price, art teacher. She is enthusiastic and constructively critical of the efforts of the club members.

The Echo, John Glenn's newspuper, is informative, amusing, and thought-provoking. It keeps students informed of newsworthy events in and around John Glenn. The editorial page gives students an opportunity to express their opinions on pertinent matters. The Clublicity columns gives news about the many extra-curricular organizations. The sports pages are interesting and informative, and there are articles on varied subjects which are interesting to the students.

The newspaper is staffed by students of journalism, as practical usage of their journalism education. The newspaper is published by the John Glenn graphic arts center.

The Echo is produced not only for the benefit of the student-body, but also for the benefit of its producers. The Echo staff gives many of its after school hours, in addition to the regular class hours, to the publication.

The students learn journalistic style and form of composition and the technical side of publishing a newspaper. The Echo is welcomed as an educational program and a channel of information to the school by the administration.

Labored Many Long Hours

The publication of a yearbook is a difficult and tedious task. There are many varied jobs that must be done. Mr. Dan Diadiun, the sponsor and journalism instructor, was the initiator of the Satellite. He selected a staff to publish his yearbook, and they set themselves to compose the best SATELLITE to be published in John Glenn High School. The many varied jobs, from photographs to advertisements, were meted out to capable persons. A general format was decided upon, and the theme and tone of the yearbook was established. Many hectic hours were spent in producing the SATELLITE.

The SATELLITE, which was published by a senior staff, is understandably devoted to the seniors. Those members of the Class of '66 who have distinguished themselves in academics, sports, or extra curricular activities have been noted in the SATELLITE.

The yearbook staff expresses its gratitude to the cooperative administration and faculty of John Glenn High School.

'Daedalus' Was John Glenn's 1st Literary Magazine

Mrs. Sue Dondershine, English teacher, is an energetic, inspiring member of the faculty. A literary magazine was only one of her many ideas. The publication of the magazine was approved by the John Glenn High School cabinet, an administrative body of department chairmen and general administrators.

Mrs. Dondershine chose her honors senior English class as "editors" of the first John Glenn literary magazine. Contributions to the magazine were requested from all students. Poems, short stories, and critical essays were received.

Using their knowledge of literary forms, the class evaluated the contributions, putting to practical use the education they had received in the first semester of their honors English class.

The literary magazine, Daedalus, was published at the school's expense and proudly distributed throughout the school district.

Mrs. Dondershine helps Karen Moorehead revise a piece of poetry, for the first volume of the literary magazine, Daedalus.

Through the school years, students are continually competing. Students compete for grades, particular recognition, student council offices, etc. The senior year is especially competitive. The seniors vie for top grades, honors diplomas, college acceptances, and scholarship awards. Much tension is built up from this competition and the continual pressures in the acquiring of an education. Inter- and intraschool sports competition provides opportunities for healthful vent of these tensions.

Interschool athletics are conducted in nine sports. Competition is generally intra-league. John Glenn High School belongs to the Northwest Suburban Athletic Association. The competition is rough for the teams are usually well-matched. All of the league-schools are fairly new institutions, striving to establish winning records.

Victories and defeats are accepted with good sportsmanship at John Glenn High School, for sportsmanship is a necessary component of competition. The athletic teams are representative of John Glenn High School's — Face of Competition.

Going into this season with nearly the entire squad returning, John Glenn's second year varsity football team no longer looked like beginners as was basically their status the previous season. The eager and experienced 1965 team showed rugged and aggressive tendencies at the beginning of what could have possibly been a championship season.

The Rockets lost no time in making their presence known as they gave up only nine points in winning their first three contests. In a showdown game with also-unbeaten rival North Farmington, coach Bob Lusk and the Glenn team knew that if they ever had to be up for a game, this was the one.

That rain-soaked contest was perhaps the turning point in the Rocket season as they took a disheartening 17-6 beating from the much larger Northwest Suburban League champs after holding a 6-3 halftime edge.

The Glenn season from that point on was mediocre and they were beaten twice more and tied once, ending up with a 5-3-1 mark. That record, although not what was hoped for, was almost the reverse of the first year, John Glenn team.

John Glenn finished in a tie for third place in the league and placed two backs in the top five area scorers. Dick Drury, right halfback, and Ron Kuban, fullback, tied for fourth place with 42 points apiece. Kuban and tackle Pete Mathison were unanimously selected to the Northwest Suburban League's first unit and guard Larry Waldo and halfback John Wood were given honorable mention.

A strong nucleus of seniors made up the bulk of the squad, but juniors Mike Knight, Mike Mahakian, Ron Gainer and Larry Waldo will be among those counted on heavily to bring Glenn another winning season next fall.

As the first grid team to play on John Glenn's football field, the Rocket junior varsity football team ended with a winning season, as did their varsity "big brothers."

The reserves had impressive victories over such highly-respected teams as Ann Arbor and Birmingham Groves. Coach Norm Hoenes and Gordon Davis blamed a lack of depth as the basic problem in the squad. But the winning season indicates that any problems they had were not bad enough to ruin their season.

Sophomores Tim Wozny, Chuck Morris, Steve Paschke, and Dennis Malaney were outstanding performers in the backfield positions.

Roger Jenkins, Ray Lane, Steve Decker, Bill O'Conner, Dan Eddy, and Darryl McLaughlin performed well on the line.

Eddy and McLaughlin were ends and caught some key passes as well as doing an adequate job of blocking.

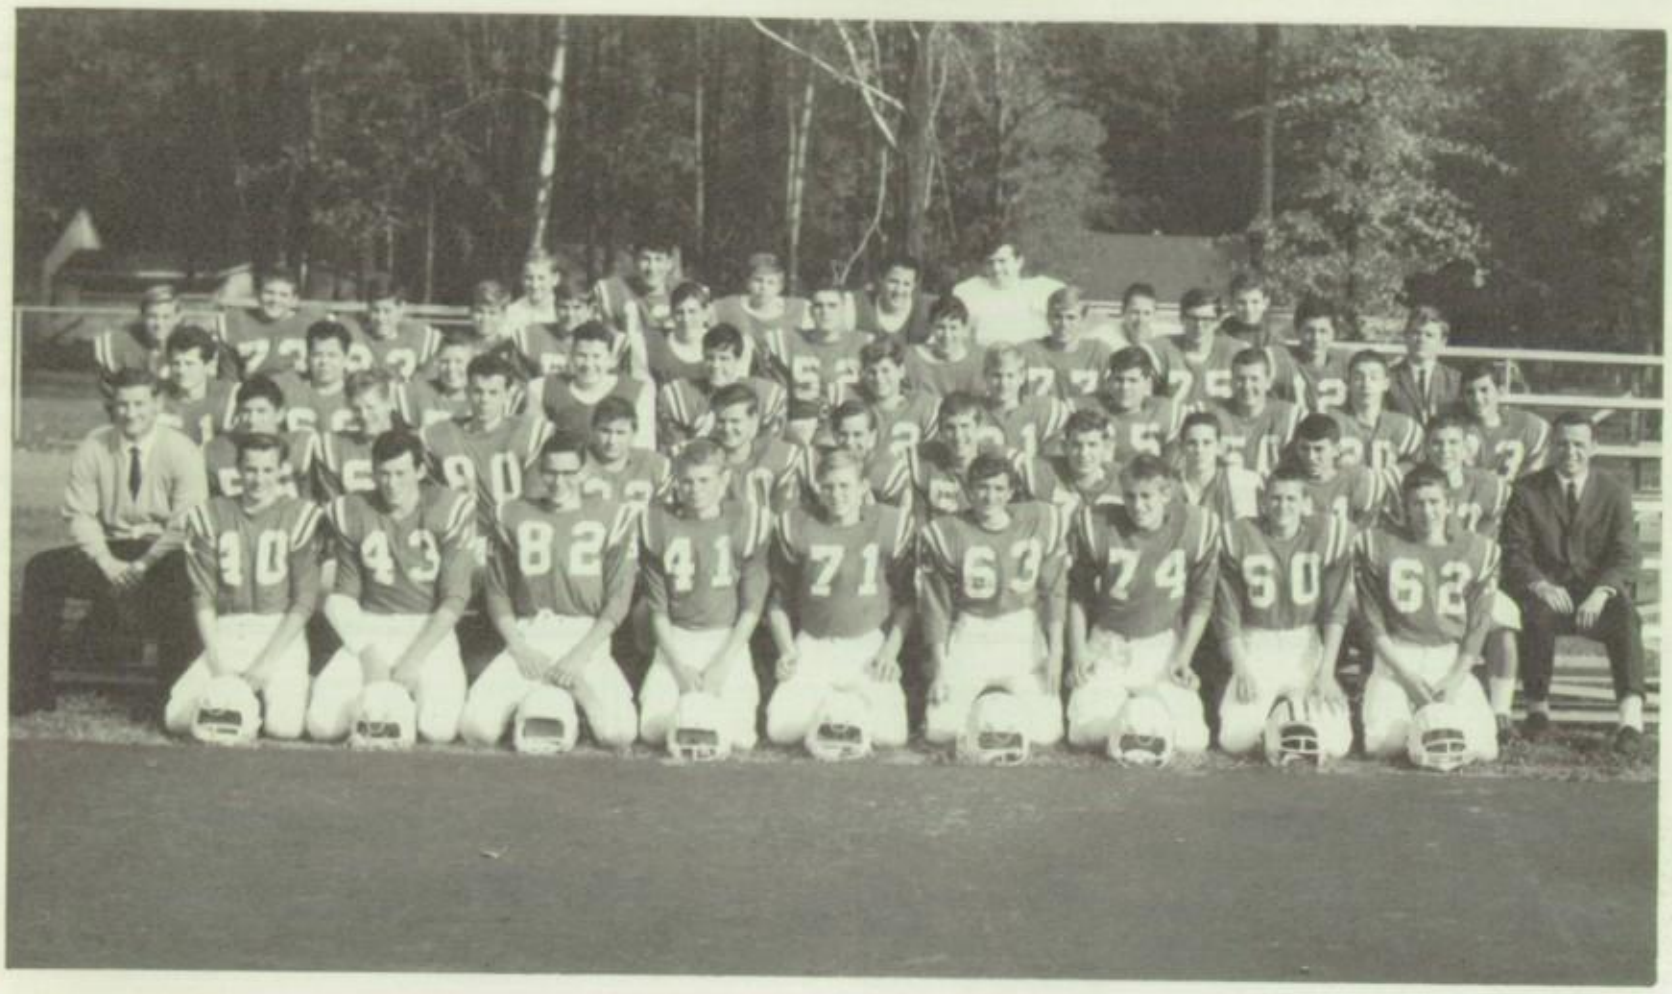
Freshmen Had 'Character- Building' Season,



With John Glenn attempting to build up a well-balanced football program, the early work in the lower grades undoubtedly will play a key role in the development of such a program.

Coaches George Sommerman and Leo Schuster are two people on whom that burden rests. Coaching fundamentals and training young men to eventually master the game are part of the job these men have to attain in their handling of the freshmen grid squad.

The team this season looked well-developed as a whole, but a couple of bad breaks altered their season to a much poorer finish than they deserved.

A couple of bright spots showed through the 3-7 record, however, as some promising players were unveiled: such players as Bill Bolitho, Bill Shellenbarger, Andy Felan and Mac Domke, to name just a few who are probable grid candidates in the next year or two.

One area of athletics which does not require equipment, does not require a track, a diamond, a mat, a court, a rink or a pool, but which does require a lot of stamina is that sometimes overshadowed, and under-publicized sport, cross country.

To many people, running is unnecessary work, a tedious task, or just plain exercise. The Rocket harriers make running a competitive thing and work hard at it to improve speed and endurance in order to represent John Glenn in athletics.

The Rockets were faced with a much tougher schedule in the 1965 season than in their previous one, but fared reasonably well, ending with a 3-5 record and a fourth-place finish in the league.

The Rockets were far from the end of the totem pole in the Regional Class A tournament, placing 12th of 23 teams, and in the Wayne Invitational tieing second place out of six teams.

"I have all but two men returning next fall," claimed coach Jerry Szukaitus, "and the chances look good." The chances he hopes for are a higher place in the league and any invitational meets, plus perhaps sending a runner or two to the state meet.

In the game of football the primary functions are good blocking and good tackling. In basketball the area which corresponds with those basics is rebounding.

John Glenn's varsity cagers had a balance of speed, shooting skill, and desire, but a lack of rebounding was enough to overshadow those good points. Coach Chris Theodore blames the lack of rebounding for the Rockets' disappointing 2-14 record in the 1965-66 season.

The teams' record in their first year was even poorer than this year's, but the John Glenn "5" has yet to win a league encounter. The league was strong and it is certain that the Rockets could have fared much better in some other leagues.

Next season Glenn's cager team will have a number of three-year veterans returning. Mike Mahakian and Dennis Jackson are a pair of 6'2" forwards who are still growing and have played key roles in the teams' attack. Steve Decker and Mike "Bucky" McMaster are both guards who have seen a lot of playing time and should be the playmakers next season. Nelson Ellison, Bill Bable, Joe Walker and Len Wells are the only members being graduated from the Rockets this year. Wells, who captained the team both his junior and senior years, was voted honorable mention in the Northwest Suburban League twice and was named to the All-Area prep roster once.

A team can play only so long and so well on desire before its weak points begin to catch up with it. The team with the tallest players will have the advantage. John Glenn is hoping to attain such an advantage for itself soon. Perhaps even as soon as the 1966-67 season.

Coach Barry Basel worked hard with the team. However, the almost continuous player shuffling was a major factor in the team's dismal season.

A 3-7 won-lost record is not a great deal to be happy about, but the freshmen basketball team made up for their deficiency in wins by demonstrating a fine attitude and a desire to compete.

Coach Gordon Davis had a squad that he said was willing to practice, willing to be gentlemen, and willing to improve. Practice was often limited because of a time factor, limiting use of the court, but nevertheless, the frosh squad had improved a good deal on fundamentals by the end of the season.

John Glenn's littlest cage team may have been the smallest in size, but in spirit and attitude, the eighth grade squad was right up there with the more experienced teams.

Although his team finished with a .500 season, coach Leo Schuster felt that the 5-5 record should not be the determining factor in the great deal evaluation of the team's performance.

With three other basketball teams playing for Glenn the littlest Rockets were not always granted the floor time which is needed for developing good team play.

Steve Brown was the high point-getter, netting 59 points in the course of the season. Mike Maupin followed with 30 points and Larry Gerdow and Joe McKolay had 28 points each.

Wrestlers Proved Competive Spirit

In ancient times, when the gladiators fought, the winner was determined only by whether he lived or died. Times have changed, but the competitive spirit has not, and John Glenn's equivalent of the gladiators is the wrestling squad.

Death does not decide a wrestling match, but hard training, much sacrifice and good conditioning do. The Rocket matmen worked long hours to try to attain those goals, and the wrestlers were especially self-sacrificing during the winter months.

The season record can be looked at from two angles: In dual meets, the Rockets could only manage a 3-9 mark and a second out of four teams in the Garden City West Quadangular meet and third in the Northwest Suburban League meet; On the other hand, many of the dual meets were decided by only a few points with the Rockets forfeiting at least one weight class in almost every meet. John Glenn had five firsts and two seconds in the Garden City Quad and three league champions, a second, and two third place finishers.

In individual awards, Jerry Young, a senior, wrestled at 154 and 145 pounds during the season and won titles in the West Quadangular meet and the Northwest Suburban League meet. He was also a second-place finisher in the Trenton Regionals and thus was the lone representative for Glenn in the State meet in Lansing.

John Wood and Dave Arble both had titles in the Garden City West invitational and the League meets at 95 and 133 pounds, respectively. Wood and Young were named to the All-Area mat team.

The grappling team had a strong nucleus of juniors who should make the Rockets real contenders next season. Paul Osborne, Mike Knight, Ron Gainer and Mike Hill are returning veterans who can be counted upon for a lot of action next winter.

Hill and Gainer were also titlists in the West Quad and were placers in the league. Knight was the real tragedy in the Rockets' season. The 145-pounder was 7-0 going into the North Farmington meet. Facing the Raiders' top man, Roy Roberts, in a showdown, Knight had to forfeit the match when he severely sprained his ankle and was sidelined for the remainder of the season.

A team which loses every meet in its first year of competition can only go in one direction — up! The John Glenn swimming team went up mighty impressively in the 1965-66 season winning five big dual meets to easily gain the recognition of being one of the most improved athletic teams in the school this year.

Counting on some young talent that showed promise the previous season, Coach Phil Wurzel worked strenuously with the Rocket tankers in the early training months, striving for that first dual meet win.

At last, it came, in the second meet of the season, when the Rockets chopped down the Lincoln Railsplitters of Ypsilanti, 73-32. From there out, wins came a little easier and the tankmen experienced four more victories while losing ten.

Franklin, Thurston, and Groves are the only other league teams with pools, but all three are powerhouses and could probably all take league firsts in a number of other conferences.

Glenn's talent was divided mostly between a few individuals who were usually consistent in their showings. Jim Pettit, Dan Higgs, Bill Adkins, Ray Glandon, Ray Lane, Bill Green, Dale Barbu, and Rich Schoenfeld were the aquamen in the limelight for the most part.

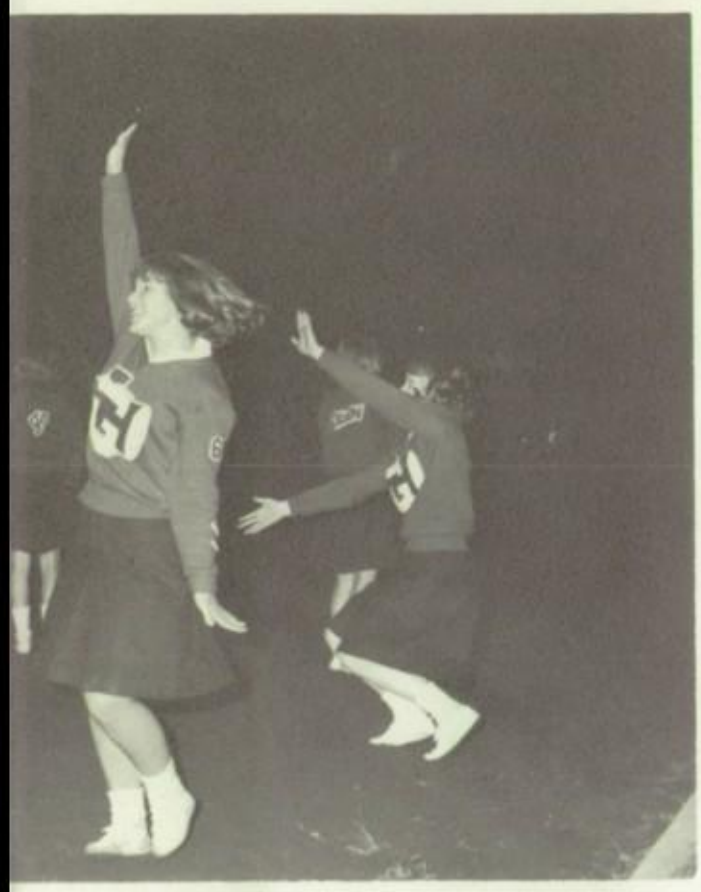
Cheerleaders Personified Pep



Varsity cheerleaders cheer the football team to another victory.

The cheerleaders are an energetic group to whom everyone looks with envy and respect. They are the embodiment of the school spirit, and John Glenn High School varsity cheerleaders are especially energetic.

Through losing streaks and just plain hard luck, the cheerleaders may be counted upon to display a cheerful and determined face. The varsity cheerleaders support their sports in all respects. It was the varsity cheerleaders who sponsored the Mr. Rocket contest, in which school spirit and appreciation of the Rockets were expressed.

The junior varsity sports teams are hard-working and determined. The team members are continually working to improve their skills to become eligible for the varsity teams. Improvement of team spirit is also stressed in junior varsity. There is interschool competition for the football, basketball, tennis and baseball junior varsity teams. The teams are well-matched, for the league schools are relatively new.

Sometimes the difference between winning and losing is the encouragement given by spectators. Junior varsity cheerleaders are chosen to give that extra boost for victory. These girls are energetic, vital cheerleaders who vocally support their teams. The reserve cheerleaders understand sports situations. These girls are also training themselves to become varsity cheerleaders. Therefore, the junior varsity teams and cheerleaders sometimes display even more spirit than their varsity counterparts.

9th Grade Cheerleaders Displayed Vitality

John Glenn High School also houses eighth and ninth grade students. These students are not overlooked in favor of the high school students, as many activities, including athletics, are provided to fulfill the recreational and competitive needs of the junior high school students.

The junior high school teams compete other junior high schools in the Wayne Community School District and the Garden City School District. They compete in football, basketball, baseball, and track.

The junior teams are conscious of their shortcomings and work hard to improve, for they will soon be eligible for the senior high school sports. This year, cheerleaders were chosen for the junior teams from many energetic junior high school aspirants. The girls are also essentially preparing for possible advancement to either of the senior high school cheerleading squads. The junior high cheerleaders led the junior teams with the vitality and determination representative of young teenagers.

9th grade cheerleaders vocally support their team.

The Aquettes is an extracurricular organization for girls who are avid swimmers. Aquettes provides an opportunity for the girls to advance their swimming abilities and maintain healthy, well-co-ordinated bodies. The girls spend many hours in the pool for general improvement and development of synchronized swimming skills.

The Aquettes is not a school-financed organization. The members must raise money from various concessions to equip themselves and finance any projects. One of their financial boons is the annual Aquettes show. This show not only provides funds but also provides an opportunity for the members to exhibit their skills.

Many hours are spent preparing the show. The Aquettes not only perform in the show, but they create the skits and scenery, prepare the choreography, and costume themselves. The girls publicize the show and supervise the ticket distribution. This year's "Enchanted Toyshop" was the product of innumerable hours.

The Girls Athletic Association is a nationwide organization, a chapter of which is at John Glenn High School. The GAA is a club for girls who are interested in athletics. Those who have participated in a required number of intramurals are eligible for membership. The GAA members attend various athletic conferences. They were among many organizations that were invited to Majors Day at Eastern Michigan University. Those girls who plan to become physical education majors attended.

GAA members are frequently sports managers. Sports managers are student assistants at athletic events. They attend equipment and records. The sports managers also officiate competition. These managers are a great aid to the intramural competitions sponsored by the school.

Table tennis is one of the winter intramural sports. Linda Opliger was last year's singles champion and maintained her title this year. Linda Opliger and Vickie Fella, last year's doubles champions, successfully defended their championship.

Stiff Competition

Bowling was the first girls intramural sport offered. Westland Bowl and Town and Country Lanes offered their facilities to John Glenn High School at reduced rates. The teams consisted of five girls from one grade-level, and the leagues were composed of teams of the same grade-level. The final ratings saw these champions: High team totals, Anastarea Racos; High game team, Karen Schilling; Individual high game and average, Karen Begin.

Basketball, a winter sport, was conducted during the winter months. From the many teams that were interested, six were chosen to compete for the John Glenn High School basketball intramural championship. The teams competed twice a week after school. The final ratings found the team captained by Dianne Parlette in first place;

Tennis is a fast, invigorating sport. Tennis singles and doubles intramural competition was held in the spring. Those girls who play fifteen games receive credit that may be applied to GAA. After the fifteenth game, elimination for the championship begins. Last year's singles champion, Chris Nichols, and doubles champions Pam Voorheis and Chris Nichols are defending their title this year.

During the transition period from fall to winter, volleyball intramurals are held. Various sports are offered in intramural competition; volleyball is one of the most popular. The games are open to all girls. The teams are formed from the same grade level. All grade level teams compete for the championship. The games are held after school. They are another of the extra-curricular activities sponsored by the school for the enjoyment and benefit of the students.

This year, the sophomore volleyball team captained by Barb Black defended and maintained its championship.

Baseball is virtually the national sport. Girls as well as boys enjoy playing baseball. Softball intramurals are provided for the recreation of the interested girls. These teams are also formed on grade levels.

With Linda Opliger's '65 championship team not competing this year the way is open for newcomers.

SOFTBALL CHAMPIONS

Many hours of concern and hard work are contained in this book. If value were determined by the required labor, the SATELLITE would be a precious object monetarily, but the controlled enterprise system exists in America. It is this principle of individual freedom with respect for the freedom of others that makes America great.

Essential to the economic system is competition. Competition is the motivating force in America's free enterprise system, and the small, independent businessman is the heart of competition. His is a vigorous entrepreneur. Labor is also a necessity of our economic system. The large industries could not operate without the labor supplied by men and women.

Wayne is a community of independent enterprisers and laborers. Its location with respect to industrial Detroit is ideal. Detroit is the home of independent competition which stimulated Detroit's industries.

The SATELLITE is proud of the support it has received from the local businessmen. This is — the Face of Commerce.

Best Wishes

WHY STUDY...

if the machine knows the answers?

If you studied all your life you wouldn't amass as much information as a computer can digest in a few seconds. At the National Bank of Detroit, for example, a computer can sort, process and do all the record-keeping for a million checks a day . . . without even breathing hard.

Does this mean the world will run out of work for people to do? No. At NBD we employ MORE people than we did before automation. Machines do the drudgery; people—with training, knowledge, judgment—are needed more than ever.

That is why we urge you to get all of the education you can . . . and, when you are ready for employment, remember that among the many diversified jobs at NBD, there may be one just right for you.
